Miracle of Surgery Gives Ex-Convict Fresh Start

"Mystery Woman" Given New Face in Two Hours at Public Demonstration. Rogues' Galleries in Danger of Becoming Obsolete.

To the muted music of a stringed orchestra, playing the latest popular dance tunes, 1,000 astounded persons recently witnessed a miracle of plastic surgery at the International Association of Beauty Culturists convention in New York. A "mystery woman," said to have served twenty years in prison for killing her husband, was the subject of the operation. It was explained that the woman, after her release from prison, found it impossible to make a living owing to her being recognized by the deep lines of tragedy which her long prison ordeal had etched upon her face. Under glaring Klieg lights the masked figure of the woman reclined on an operating chair in full view of the huge audience, while Dr. Howard Crum, famous plastic surgeon, destroyed her old face and actually sliced twenty years from her life with his glittering scalpel. The operation took two hours, at the end of which no one in the audience would have recognized the patient as the same haggard figure who had sat down in the chair. The demonstration brings up the alarming possibility of the new surgery being taken up by members of the underworld whose faces have become embarrassingly familiar to the police. In that event the extensive rogues' galleries maintained by the police departments of our big cities will automatically become as obsolete as yesterday's tabloid.

New York—A new scheme has been added to the repertoire of our criminal element by the recent remarkable demonstration of plastic surgery, performed before 1,000 persons, mostly women, at the convention of the International Association of Beauty Culturists in New York.

Those of our gangsters whose faces are becoming embarrassingly familiar to the police may now discard the old face and acquire a new one in less time than it takes to have a tooth extracted. A thug may go under the ether with a pan that resembles a batered ashcan lid and come out with the profile of a John Barrymore or a Clark Gable.

To the soothing music of "Sweet and Lovely" and "Call Me Darling," Dr. J. Howard Crum, famous plastic surgeon, aided by two assistants and a nurse, built up a new face on a woman who had voluntarily submitted herself as a subject for the demonstration.

The woman, whose identity was concealed by a mask, did not offer herself as a sacrifice in the cause of fair science. Her story is a strange one. It was erplained that she spent 20 years in prison for killing her husband, and since her release has tried several times to make a living operating beauty shops.

She always failed in her enterprises because the acid of tragedy had etched indelible lines upon her face which invariably led to her being recognized.

White masked and swathed in white cloth, the mystery woman reclined upon the operating chair under the glare of powerful Kleig lights while Dr. Crum literally sliced twenty years from her life with a glitering scalpel.

For two hours and seven minptes there, while the orchestra went on the surgeon calmly went about his work, cutting here and stitching with its muted wailing of "How Long Will It Last?" and "Goodnight Sweetheart." During the second hour of the operation four women in the audience fainted and were removed from the crowded room.

Through the entire ordeal, the patient lay passively in the chair without uttering a single sound, or betraying the slightest evidence of pain. Once, when an anaesthetic was injected with a hypodermic needle, she did wince, and her mouth quivered, but that was the only sign of life she gave during the whole bizarre performance.

When at last Dr. Crum gave the new face its final touch, the audience burst into aplause when the patient was swung around in the chair to face the assembly and handed a mirror so that she could see the transformation she had undergone.

The metamorphosis was remarkable. The woman ex-convict, with the sagging cheeks, sullen mouth and deeply-lined face, was gone and in her place sat a smooth-faced, agreeable-looking young woman. Nobody, who had not seen the actual transformation gradually take place, would believe she was the same woman.

The feeling of the age-fearing women in the audience were probably of relief at seeing how easily the ravages of Father Time might be repaired, but to others, for whom years and their effects hold no terrors, the first thought was "what a boon to criminals."

If the new-face-for-old idea is seriously taken up by what is picturesquely known as the underworld, all the rogues' galleries in the police files of our big cities will automatically become as obsolete as yesterday's tabloid. One can readily see the difficulty of identifying a brand new synthetic face with only a picture of the discarded one for guidance.

EDWARDS TO IOWA PRISON

Adel, Ia.—Silver Jim Edwards, last of the old time yegg men, late Friday was taken to Fort Madison prison, less than twenty-four hours after he had robbed a jewelry store in Perry. Edwards pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny in the nighttime and quickly was sentenced to serve ten years in the Iowa penitentiary by Judge Cooper of the Dallas county district court. Sheriff Knee left with the prisoner, whose admitted criminal career has covered forty of the seventy years of his life. Last year, Edwards was released from the Nebraska prison.

TEXAS SHERIFF ACQUITTED

Senora, Tex.—W. C. Fowler, Upton county sheriff, was acquitted of murder charges brought after the machine gun slaying of Graham Barnett, former Texas ranger and noted pistol shot. Barnett was slain last Dec. 6 at Rankin, Tex. Witnesses testified the sheriff approached in a motor car, lowered a window of the machine, and fired a volley of shots at the ex-ranger. On the stand the officer said he shot Barnett "to save his own life" when the latter advanced on him in a threatening manner. Other witnesses said Barnett repeatedly had threatened to kill the sheriff.
