THE GERMAN THEATER.

Triple Performances Last Night in Turner Hall.

The German theater was filled in every part of the building Sunday evening, by a large an appreciative audience, drawn together to witness three of the most amusing pieces ever produced on the German stage. The first play presented was entitled "English," and was thoroughly side-splitting from beginning to end. Mr Molchin's personation of an English lord was admirable, and evoked bursts of genuine applause on all sides. The reporter, who has traveled in England, and, of course, been on terms of intimacy with most of the English lords, can testify to the faithfulness of Mr. Molchin's delineation of the beau ideal English lord. Mr. Baureis made a very charming Adele Treuherz, a young widow, and Mrs. Puls-Ahl as Mary, the servant maid, performed her part very attractively. Miss Thiessen in the role of Rosa and Mr. Puls as John were both excellent and deserve commendation.

The second piece was a short musical melange which was very well received. In the third and last play, entitled "A Short Experience in an Office," Mr. Molchin in the character of a merchant and Mr. Baureis as clerk were much applauded and they certainly deserved all the applause they received. Mrs. Baureis as Lieschen acted very charmingly and looked as pretty as a picture. Mr. Penner as Reinhold showed up well and Mr. Puls as Schwuppe, a traveler, was excellent. The remaining roles were all well sustained.

At the conclusion of the Thespian part of the programme the audience tripped the light fantastic with great gusto. On the whole the entertainment was a grand success and does great credit to Omaha's German theater.

BROKEN CISTERNS.

The Words of "The Weeping Prophet" Seriously Discussed.

An Interesting Sermon by Rev. W. J. Harsh.

The services at the Second Presbyterian church yesterday morning were inviting, as usual. The solo immediately before the sermon was sung very beautifully, and the last hymn was very impressive.

Rev. W. J. Harsha chose for his text Jeremiah ii:13: "For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me, the fountain of living water, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water."

The Prophet Jeremiah has been called the "Weeping Prophet." He bewailed his own sins as truly as he did the sins of the nation. And on account of his fidelity to the Supreme Ruler he became a captive at home and a captive abroad. But he was called a Weeping Prophet especially because he bewailed the sins of the people.

It seems a light thing to man to wander away from God; not to go far away, but only a pleasant distance. But it is truly no light thing to wander away from him and finally forsake him and all his admonitions; for then he will refrain, and the mercies of an omnipotent God will cease. The people whom God was leading by his prophet Jeremiah were not a foreign people, they were a people which God had chosen as his own. It reads: "My people have committed two evils." As Esther felt that she was indebted to Mordecai, so should the Christian feel his indebtedness to the power which gave to him the hope of eternal life. And as she saved his people from destruction, so should the Christian manifest the same loyalty toward their benefactor. We will look at this subject, first, negatively. The forsaking of God. It is negative in its nature.

God says of himself, "I am the fountain of living water," and this would include two things, that which was unceasing, and that which can give the only solace to the soul.

From the fountain we see the water coursing its way through pleasant valleys and fruitful fields, made pleasant and fruitful because of the existence of the never-failing stream. And among the nations of the earth we see the perpetual stream from the fountain of God's love producing civilization and enlightenment.

It is not all at once that man forsakes that which he has had some bond of attachment for. There is at first a forgetfulness of the kindnesses of the past. They were at one time so deeply impressed upon the mind, and there were also intentions in the heart to manifest a spirit of thankfulness, but the last shadows of those kindnesses are fading from the memory; and after these kindnesses have vanished from our minds, we forget we had been traveling in the path which God has prepared for those who are His true followers. The power which once bound us now is scarcely noticeable. We then complain and murmur in reference to God's providence and care. We have not the proper respects for His sanctuary and neglect His worship. And we are at last in the dark chasm of idolatry, away from the foundation of life, where the sounds of our worship echo in solemn mockery. We are idolators. The mind then stops to meditate, and compares the present with the past, to find discontent compared with happiness, and the mind is filled with surprise and dismay. And the mind thinks, What is happiness? What are the forces which inspire the soul with zeal to increase that inspiration?

The talent of the unbelieving world has endeavored to answer this query, but as the airy bubbles vanish from the sight, so these answers would vanish from the mind of him who in search for happiness attempted to grasp their sweet influence

The young man thinks he has found the fountain of happiness when he relies upon the results of his indomitable energy, but he has never found it there.

Happiness must be consistent with the highest attainments of man. It must not be disturbed in the least by the trivial trials of this terrestrial sphere, happiness not attained by worshipping pleasure, though he don the garments of beauty and perpetuity. The admiration of the world will not not produce that happiness which the immortal soul is longing for. He who has found the key which unlocks the door to happiness, has found, when unlocking the door, eternity, and over the passage way is written, "Thou art welcomed to the presence of the King."

Read the poems of any language written by those who have no hope of a heavenly inheritance, and you will find an unsatiable longing for something which is beyond, and which cannot be attained. We must have a happiness which will not be disturbed by death, a happiness which in time is but in its germ. Pain, sickness or death are not evils, they are the means by which man is compelled to enter heaven, but sin is an evil, and it is this that has caused the fainting heart to exclaim, Oh, that I had but a drop from the fountain of true happiness.

But when man does forsake God he is disgracing and trampling under foot the Savior who has offered him mercy. As a memorable general threw himself before his retreating army and said, "If you yield to the enemy you must do it by passing over my body," the man who turns his back to the blessings and entreaties of God and passing over the body of Jesus, the captain of our salvation.

In the second place there was a positive evil. They were hewing out for themselves broken cisterns which could hold no water. And this was a very happy illustration, because of the existence of large receptacles for water under the cities. Yet while these cisterns were cut in the solid rock there was a possibility of there being an imperfection in the stone to cause the work to be in vain.

It is astonishing that men are ever trying to find a substitute for God, and thus end their work by failure. We may believe that God is everything and that everything is God, but it is a fractured rock, and it is useless to attempt to cause it to be the receptable of living water. The most wise men of sacred and profane history who have attempted to find a source of true pleasure, other than God, have failed—they have failed to warn others who might be tempted as they were to search for that, which by the investigation, placed the object of their search in the dark.

Then, if we know where true happiness may be found, should we not thank the originator of that charm of the soul, and, if we have it not, should we not cast our idols away and accept the teachings of an Eternal Deity.

NEW ENTERPRISE.

The Big Drug House of Leighton & Clarke.

They Establish Business on an Extensive Plan.

Among the recent important business ventures made in Omaha none promises to be more successful or more to the advantage of the city than that inaugurated by the firm of Leighton & Clarke, whose place of business is the new brick block on Harney street, between Eleventh and Twelfth.

This building is 33 by 132 feet in size, four stories high and with a basement as commodious and well ventilated as any of the upper stories. A BEE reporter went through the whole house to-day and found it stocked from bottom to top with as fine a stock of paints, oils, glass, drugs, etc., as ever was put in any store west of the Missouri. An elevator connects the five departments of the building, a big force of men is at work packing goods to fill orders, and the sight is as busy a one as one could wish to see. A splendidly equipped laboratory is located on the third floor, and manned by expert chemists and assistants and from the elegant offices on the first floor to the topmost story, order reigns everywhere and things move as by clockwork.

The new firm proposes to doan exclusively wholesale business in the line mentioned and judging from what was seen they will step at once into popular favor. They also control a large wholesale store at Lincoln, run under the firm name of Leighton & Co., who succeed Leighton & Brown and also Kennard Bros. of this city.

Mr. Leighton is regarded as one of the best druggists in the country and will have the management of the business here. Mr. Clarke will not take an active part in the business but will be represented by his son, Harry T. Clarke, formerly in the internal revenue service.

Arrangements have been made for a large warehouse on the railroad track and every facilty will be employed to give the trade prompt attention and satisfaction in every respect.

Financially, the credit of the firm is unlimited, and with the wide acquaintance and reputation for sterling business worth and integrity enjoyed by the individual members of the new house cannot but build up a large business in this and other western states.

Thousands Say So.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at 50 cents a bottle by C. F. Goodman.

"Pictured Scenes," Etc.

An interesting group photograph is on exhibition at one of the picture stores of this city, the subjects of which have many lady admirers who will be glad to learn the story of it. Two of the boys are well known clerks in the U. P. freight office, the third is the junior partner of a dry goods firm. The boys were recreating at Niagara Falls last summer and while gazing at the mad whirl of waters below the great cataract, decided to be photoed. Three is sometimes considered a crowd, but for a picture seven was necessary to make a respectable frontispiece to a background of whirlpool and rocks. The landlord of the hotel was appealed to and he generously detailed four of his fairest biscuit pushers to equalize the sexes in the group. The picture represents the party sitting on a platform over the edge of Whirlpool rapids, with huge boulders in front to hide their feet. The girl with goggles in the corner tries to penetrate the mists in the distance to avoid the fascinating winks of the dry goods man, while a girl, well banged, laps over a good quarter section of the senior freight clerk. On the left hand corner the third nestles lovingly between two girls, and with eyes closed and open mouth swallows the ecstacy of the moment. The boys will take their own girls the next time they go to Niagara.

THE NORWEGIAN SOCIETY.

A Highly Successful Entertainment On Saturday Evening Last.

The Norwegian Singing society gave one of their pleasant sociable entertainments on Saturday evening last, in their hall, on Fourteenth street. Quite a large number of our most prominent Norwegian and Swedish citizens were present, and all those little differences of opinion which some times exist between the Norwegians and Swedes were entirely forgotten while joining in the festive dance or delighting their auricular organs in listening to the dulcet strains of Irvine's well-known and popular orchestra.

Prof. Jackson has a splendid choir, which, under his able management, is now able to do great things in the musical line. Taken as a whole the entertainment may safely be pronounced a grand success. Great credit is due to the highly efficient committee consisting of Messrs. J. Jakobson, J. Hofstad, L. Kamp and P. Wiig, for the able manner in which they performed their duties. Mr. G. Olson was also a valuable aid, and did his part of the business in a creditably way.

This society is doing excellent work in the Gate City by cementing our Norwegian citizens together in the bonds of friendship, and promoting feelings of good will and brotherly love which cannot fail to be productive of good to all concerned. Financially the society is working on a sound basis, and will in the future be one of the most prosperous institutions in Nebraska.

QUICKLY QUENCHED.

A Fire Burns Out a Boarding House Kitchen on Thirteenth Street.

At half-past eight last evening an alarm of fire went up from box twelve, and it seemed hardly a minute before No. 3 hose cart and the hooks had come down from their headquarters to the scene of action, a boarding house, occupied by Mrs. Mary B. Gabler, on Thirteenth street, between Douglas and Dodge, just south of Mayor Chase's residence.

The fire had caught in the flue of the kitchen chimney in some unaccountable way and crawled up into the roof between the studding, so that it was very difficult to handle. It loomed up for a few moments, but after cutting into the roof a little the boys had it under subjection. They made wonderful time in getting there, and they accomplished a great deal by saving the old building. It stands entire, but the inside walls are burned and everything ruined by the water.

The furniture was moved into the street, but taken back after the fire, and the family stayed in the house. It is the property of Mrs. A. Wyman and was partly insured.
