HE LOST THEM BOTH.

"Cora," said old Miss Duchesne abruptly, "did you ever have your fortune told?"

Cora started at the sudden question and then smiled.

"If" said she, "my fortune told! How should I? We city girls never stumble across gipsy camps."

Old Miss Duchesne was sallow, with very black hair, scarcely as yet sprinkled with gray, although 60 years had passed over it; sharp black eyes, and a nose and chin which nearly met. She looked almost like a sphinx herself as she sat there.

"I used to tell fortunes when I was a girl," said she.

"With cards?" laughed Cora.

"No, by palmistry. Shall I tell yours?"

Cora looked at the old lady with surprise. Was she in jest or earnest? Why did she speak so sharply? Why did those glittering eyes seem to burn their way into her very brain?

But Miss Duchesne had been the school friend of Cora's mother years ago, and Cora had always humored her eccentricities.

"If you choose," she said, half hesitating.

"Give me your hand," said Miss Duchesne; "the same hand which you are one day going to bestow upon Duke Chesterton in marriage."

"Yes," said Cora, calmly.

"A white, plump, velvety little hand," said Miss Duchesne, peering so closely into the palm that her nose almost touched the rosy skin. "Let me see!—let—me—see! The line of luck; the line of life; the line of love! Ah, here we are! Beware of a dark girl. She is coming between you and the line of love. She will work you sore trouble yet."

The girl sat as if some new light had suddenly dawned upon her brain.

"You mean my Cousin Ariadne?" said she, involuntarily.

Miss Duchesne nodded.

"I mean your Cousin Ariadne," said she. "Child, child! can it be possible that you are so blind as not to see what is going on under your very eyes? That woman is winning your lover away?"

Cora smiled incredulously.

"Oh, but that is quite impossible. Duke loves me! He is engaged to me!"

"Men are false," said Miss Duchesne with energy. "There never was one yet proof against the wiles of a sirene like Ariadne Buckingham."

"Miss Duchesne, you must not talk so," faltered Cora, with the color varying on her cheek and a startled look in her eyes. "Ariadne is my guest. Duke is my engaged lover. I——"

Silently Miss Duchesne drew aside the ruby-velvet draperies of the window and pointed to where Miss Leslie's own carriage was drawn up opposite the curbstone. Ariadne Buckingham—a tall, brilliant brunette—was just stepping out. Marmaduke Chesterton, bowing low over her hand, pressed his lips to it as he assisted her to alight.

"Do you see that?" asked Miss Duchesne.

Cora burst into tears and hurried from the room just as Miss Buckingham entered from an opposite portal, all smiles, followed by Mr. Chesterton.

"Where is Cora?" said the brunette, airily. "I hope her headache is better. We have had such a delightful morning at the picture gallery, and we have brought home some exquisite cut flowers to arrange for dinner. Where are they, Duke? Bring them in here. I am sure Cora will excuse us for invading her boudoir."

But Miss Duchesne did not return the fair Ariadne's smiles. She gathered up her knitting, made some curt reply about desiring to be alone, and stalked out of the room.

"Cross old thing!" pouted Ariadne. "One would almost imagine, Duke, that you were her lover, and that she was jealous!"

She laughed a shrill, sweet tinkle of a sound. Marmaduke Chesterton laughed also. All that Ariadne Buckingham did or said was perfect in his eyes.

Miss Buckingham's father had lost his all in unfortunate ventures, and Ariadne had been brought up on an income of nothing per annum.

Every one pitied poor Ariadne, who, nevertheless, was always exquisitely dressed, went everywhere, and lived, metaphorically speaking, on the fat of the land.

She had written to Cora Leslie, her mother's cousin, that she would like to spend a winter with her; and Cora, full of sweet, womanly compassion, had promptly sent money for her to come.

"I never had a sister," wrote Cora, "and I am sure that I shall love you dearly."

And it was thus that Ariadne had rewarded her. The old story over again of the serpent who stings its benefactor.

But although Cora had been blind, the rest of the world, like Miss Duchesne, were more clear-sighted.

Colonel Vavason, Mr. Chesterton's uncle, took him sternly to task for his defection from the line of equity.

Duke laughed.

"My dear uncle," said he, "you take things too seriously! Cannot an engaged man so much as look at another woman?"

But one day, in blossomy May, Colonel Vavason's card was brought up to Miss Leslie.

Cora was preparing to go out with Miss Duchesne for a drive. She was full of bright happiness that morning, and even Miss Duchesne breathed more freely, for Ariadne Buckingham had left them the night before in response—so at least she gave them to understand—to a telegram from her father, who was ill. The nightmare dream was over at last—all the world was May!

She ran down into the drawing-room, where Colonel Vavason leaned against the mantel, tall, pale and handsome.

"Oh, Colonel," she said, brightly, "I am so glad to see you. Duke is coming——"

But she paused as her eyes fell on his pale features, the look of mute horror in his eyes.

"Duke will never come here again," said he in a low tone. "Be a heroine, Cora. Bear your trouble bravely. Duke went away before daylight. He left a note asking me to tell you. He loves Ariadne Buckingham, and has followed her to her home!"

And so Cora Leslie closed the chapter of her first love—or rather Marmaduke Chesterton closed it for her.

At the end of a year Marmaduke Chesterton came back. He was not married to Miss Buckingham after all. The beautifull brunette had accepted his presents and smiled on him with those melting eyes of hers, amused herself at his expense and finally wedded a young lieutenant of artillery to whom she had been engaged for years. Duke was pale and haggard as he stood there in the boudoir, where he had first asked Cora Leslie to be his wife.

But Cora was lovelier than ever. As he looked upon her he marveled that he could have ever cared for one like Ariadne Buckingham.

"Cora," he said, in a broken voice, as she cordially gave him her hand, "can you ever forgive me?"

"Oh, yes," she answered, smiling, "I forgave you long ago. And oh, how you must have suffered, Duke!"

"But," he went eagerly on, "I am disenchanted now. My eyes are opened at last. I know that I never really loved any one but you. Sweet Cora, is it too late to ask you to renew our engagement once more?"

"I am afraid it is," said Cora, still serenely self-possessed and calm.

"But why," he urged.

"One reason," answered Cora, "is that I have long ceased to care (except, of course, as a friend) for the man who loved Ariadne Buckingham better than me. The other is that I am to be married next week to Colonel Vavason."

"To—my uncle?"

"Yes," she answered, "to your uncle. I love and honor him as I never loved and honored man before."

So Marmaduke Chesterton lost both blonde and brunette, and Miss Duchesne was satisfied at last that her darling was worthily wedded.

WHAT HE WANTED.

A Shopkeeper Who Had Ideas About Advertisements.

Texas Siftings.

As he shot into the editorial arena he wiped his bald head with a gaudy silk handkerchief.

"I want to be attacked," he said, and he winked at the answer-to-correspondents editor.

"The man who attacks people and who sheds the innocent gore of indignant readers who have their names spelled wrong in the paper can be found down that passage, second door to the left," said the mild young person who was inditing an answer to Julia B.'s request for a receipt to remove freckles from her car.

"You misunderstand my meaning, young man," said the stranger, as he dived into the side pocket of his duster and produced a 6x8 business card, on which was printed;

B. H. PULKERHAM, dealer in
Choice Teas, Unparalled Coffee, Cheapest Cigars, and all kinds of Family Groceries, Domestic and Imported, at the
GREAT CONTINENTAL STORE AND HOME SUPPLY EMPORIUM, 93 Washington Avenue.

"Well, Mr. Pulkerham, what can we do for you?" said the editor.

"You see, mister, it's just this way," said the grocer, as he took a chair. "Business ain't what it ought to be, and ordinary advertising don't seem to draw trade worth a cent. Now, ever since Scheidelhoff, who keeps the tea store on the corner above, was accused in the papers of having two wives living, one in the penitentiary and the other hawking fruit in St. Louis, the woman flock to his store to buy their groceries, and he is doing a blazing business. Now, I was thinking that if one of you smart young men would just write up a column or so about me and say as how I had eloped with the two beautiful daughters of one of our leading citizens—needn't mention names, you know—and that my wife, for the sake of the family, has kept the horrid secret to herself, it might draw. And you migt say—to give the snap, as it were—that I had been converted to the Mormon faith. I tell you if you work it right all of Scheidelhoff's customers will just pour around to my store. I'll go away fishing for a few days to make the thing look feasible like, and the sympathy that my wife will get and the trade she'll do will give my business a boom that will tide us over these dull times."

The Rise of the Flannel Shirt.

Boston Journal.

Within the last two years signs of a movement have been noticed which seems likely to cause a complete revolution in the matter of summer attire for men, and during the present season it has gathered so much strength and volume that its importance cannot with justice be any longer ignored. The introduction of the flannel shirt as a substitute for the rigid-bosomed cotton and linen abomination, which has hitherto been regarded as the test of respectability, has already met with considerable favor, and gained a large measure of that popularity which it assuredly deserves. It is singular that residents in this climate of intense summer heats have not long ago seen that a radical change in their attire was necessary, and that, as far as all occasions of business or pleasure at this season of the year are concerned, the starched shirt might be packed away in the same chest which contains the winter overcoat and furs. Not a single apology can be made for this garment during the summer. It does not adapt itself to the languorous attitudes into which the human figure allows itself to droop during the heated term, the loading of its bosom with startch renders it impervious to the air, the unnamed portions which depend below the waist are of abnormal length and not easily to be disposed of when that very necessary article of attire, the trowsers, is drawn over them, while the rigidity of the collar and cuffs is simply unenduriable by any man who has a proper idea of comfort. For state occasions, the formal dinner and the giddy whirl of the dance—if people must indulge in such festivities during the summer—the expansive white shirt-front is not out of place, although we must confess that the most picturesque and enjoyable ball we ever attended was at a large sea-shore hotel, where the young men for the most part appeared in the knickerbockers, flannel shirts and loose jackets of the pedestrian and camper-out, or the white duck and blue uniforms of the yatchman, to dance with the ladies in their cool muslins and lawns. Where the conventional shirt of civilization falls short in the balance, the merit of the flannel shirt preponderates. It sits lightly and flexibly upon the figure, conforms itself to the movement of the wearer, permits the cooling currents of air to meet the body, and cherishes instead of chafes the neck and wrists—in all of which respects it is directly oposite to its rival, which is about as comfortable in summer as a shirt of chain mail or the steel breastplate of a medieval warrior. In the matter of picturesqueness, also, the flannel shirt has superior claims.

Will it Really Cure Rheumatism?

We answer, honor bright, it will cure rheumatism, and the severest cases, too. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil was specially prepared for the rheumatic and lame. Notice letters from the people relative to its merits in nearly every paper in the country.

The Doctor's Endorsement.

Dr. D. W. Wright, Cincinnati, O., sends the subjoined professional endorsement: "I have prescribed DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS in a great number of cases and always with success. One case in particular was given up by several physicians who had been called in for consultation with myself. The patient had all the symptoms of confirmed consumption—cold night sweats, hectic fever, harassing cough, etc. He commenced immediately to get better and was soon restored to his usual health. I have also found DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS the most valuable expectorant for breaking up distressing coughs and colds that I have ever used."

American travelers spend, it is estimated, $100,000,000 in Europe every summer. The 3,500,000 inhabitants of Philadelphia, New York and Brooklyn spend $15,000,000 during the season upon the strip of sand between Cape May Point and Long Beach.

Catarrh.

The remarkable results in a disease so universal and with such a variety of characteristics as Catarrh, prove how effectually Hood's Sarsaparilla acting through the blood, reaches every part of the human system. A medicine, like anything else, can be fairly judged only by its results. We point with pride to the glorious record Hood's Sarsaparilla has entered upon the hearts of thousands of people it has cured of catarrh.

Thomas Barbour bade adieu to Benedicta Price at Liverpool twenty-eight years ago and came to America to seek his fortune. He found it, and she arrived in Philadelphia last week on the steamer British Crown, and found Thomas waiting to receive and marry her.

Catholic Seminarian.

Mr. John Cusack, St. Mary's Theological Seminary, Baltimore, Md., says after having suffered months with pleuradinia (rheumatism of the chest), and having tried everything medical talent could suggest, without relief, the pain-cure, St. Jacobs Oil was recommended and it cured him.

A family named Hicks, residing at Charleston, Ill., became demented. Those most affected are the father and mother, a fifteen year old daughter and a twelve year old son. They were about to crucify one of their smaller children on a cross which they had previously made, when neighbors interfered. They are now under lock and key at the jail.

Among the most efficacious of remedial agents are the medical preparations from the laboratory of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

A Christian church now marks the battle field of Isandhlwana, in Zululand, where the prince imperial was killed. The church is a gothic structure of white sandstone, and was very recently dedicated.

The glory of man is his strength. If you are weakened down through excessive study, or by early indiscretions, Allen's Brain Food will permanently restore all lost vigor, and strengthen all the muscles of Brain and Body. $1; 6 for $5.—At druggists.

Descendants of Martin Luther.

Luther left three sons, and it has often been said that their male line was extinguished early in the last century. But the report is confirmed that there are at Cloister Allendorf, on the Werr, in Meiningen, two brothers, Heinrich and Carl Luther, who can prove descent from the reformer by a genealogical tree, which has been deposited for safety with a Leipsic insurance company. Heinrich, the elder, is journeyman carpenter, while Carl is studying theology. Their mother is said to have been the daughter of a high official at Berlin. Their father was working at his trade as a mason in the capital, when the girl fell madly in love with him, as much through enthusiastic admiration of all that related to Martin Luther as from appreciation of the good-looking young journeyman. But the marriage ended unhappily, for the mason's wife was disinherited by her family, and said to have died in misery.

RAILROAD EMPLOYERS.

The leading business men of Providence, R. I. compose the Hunt's Remedy Co., and they guarantee all testimonials published by them to be genuine. The following, dated May 4, 1883, from Mr. W. H. Blanchard, Lowell, Mass., is but one of the thousand remarkable cures that are being made by this wonderful medicine. Mr. Blanchard says: "I have been greatly troubled for over six years with acute kidney disease, with severe pain in my back and hips. I was formerly employed on the Boston and Lowell Railroad, but was obliged, owing to the constant jar, to give up the railroad business, as many others have been obliged to do, on account of kidney disease. I have tried many medicines, but received no permanent relief. A friend recommended me to use Hunt's Remedy. I purchased a bottle of one of our druggists in Lowell, and commenced to improve at once, and after using two bottles I was entirely free from all pain, and consider myself cured, and I cheerfully recommend this wonderful medicine, Hunt's Remedy, to all the sufferers from kidney and liver disease."

AT LIBERTY.

For a number of years I was afflicted with kidney and gravel disease, and suffered with pains in my limbs and back at times so severely that it seemed that I could not endure it. I used several so-called cures recommended for these diseases, but they did me no good. A friend of mine who had used Hunt's Remedy, and pronounced it the best in use, urged me to try it, and I purchased a bottle at George K. Hall's drug store in Manchester, and before I had used one bottle I began to feel much better, the pains in the bladder and kidneys were reduced a great deal, and after using five bottles I found that Hunt's Remedy had done all that it was recommended to do. It had removed all the pain, my appetite improved, and I gained several pounds in a few weeks. I have renewed vigor and strength for one of my years (64), and I can only thank the proprietors of Hunt's Remedy for my good health of to-day, and you are at liberty to publish this, that it may be the means of some one being cured by the use of your truly wonderful remedy. 50 Years.

I have known and watched the use of Swift's Specific for over fifty years, and have never known of a failure to cure Blood Poison when properly taken. I used it on my servants from 1850 to 1865, as did also a number of my neighbors, and in every case that came within my knowledge it effected a cure. In all my life I have never known a remedy that would so fully accomplish what it is recommended to do.

H. L. DENNARD, Perry, Ga.

I have known and used Swift's Specific for more than twenty years, and have seen more wonderful results from its use than from any remedy in or out of the Pharmacopoeia. It is a certain and safe antidote to all sorts of blood poison.

J. DICKSON SMITH, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

The Great Drug House of Chicago.

We do not hesitate to say that for a year past we have sold more of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) than all other Blood Purifiers combined, and with most astonishing results. One gentleman who used half a dozen bottles says it has done him more good than treatment which cost him $1,000. Another who has used it for a Scrofulous affection reports a permanent cure from its use.

VAN SHAACK, STEVENSON & CO.

$1,000 REWARD.

Will be paid to any Chemist who will find, on analysis of 100 bottles S. S. S., one particle of Mercury, Iodide Potassium, or any mineral substance.
