Christ, the Minister of Better Things

Scripture: Hebrews 4:14-16; 7:26-27; 9:23-26; 10:11-14

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

THE topic of this lesson for young people and adults is "The Sufficient Christ"; and that phrase accurately characterizes both the letter and spirit of the Epistle to the Hebrews.

The writer of the Epistle has a deep sense of the spiritual heritage of Israel. "God," he writes, "at sundry times and in divers manners spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets"; and in the 11th chapter he records the story of the men and women of faith in a way that only a lover of Israel and of Israel's religion could have done. He is convinced of God's promise, and of His covenant with His people.

But his faith and outlook as an earnest Israelite is dominated by the supreme conviction that God, who spoke formerly through the prophets, has spoken "in these last days" through His Son, Jesus Christ, "the brightness of His glory," and "the express image of His person."

Holding, thus strongly, a belief in the divinity of Jesus, what is remarkable about his Epistle is the clarity and insistency with which he presents and expounds the fact of Christ's humanity. There is no inconsistency in this, for the doctrine of the Incarnation implies both divinity and humanity. It is the doctrine set forth in the opening of the Gospel of John, of the word made flesh, and dwelling among men (John 1:14).

With all the greatness of the past religion of Israel, it is the writer's contention that there was something incomplete, and a promise unfulfilled. Saints and prophets "obtained a good report through faith, but received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect" (Hebrews 11:39-40).

any certainty, to whom the Epistle

Though it is not known, with any certainty, to whom the Epistle was addressed, it seems evident that it was written to Jewish Christians, subject to the same sort of persecution that Saul had carried on against the Christians before he became Paul, the convert. To the charge that they were untrue to the religion of their fathers, the writer asserts the realities of the new covenant, and the nature and mission of Christ as the minister of better things.

THE key passage, of which all the rest might be regarded as exposition, is in the second chapter, and especially in 2:17. Though greater than angels, the Son of God made himself lower than the angels, taking upon Himself human nature, and being made "like unto His brethren that He might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people."

But what of priestliness and sacrifice in the Jewish religion? The writer's answer is that Jesus is a superior high priest, inasmuch as He has offered Himself a sacrifice, once for all. An insistent question, I think, concerns how much of religious faith and practice of today is in the realm of unfulfilled promise, awaiting the supreme experience of Christ Himself as "the Minister of better things."

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Christian Science Churches throughout the world on Sunday, October 12, 1947.
The Golden Text is: "He that is our God is the God of salvation; and unto God the Lord belong the issues from death" (Psalms 68:20). Other Bible citations include, "Great peace have they which love thy law: and nothing shall offend them" (Psalms 119:165).
The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, "Sickness, sin, and death, being inharmonious, do not originate in God nor belong to His government" (p. 472).

The number of veterans awaiting admission to Veterans Administration hospitals is showing a downward trend because VA is able to take care of more patients every month.
