Urea Instead Of Protein in Dairy Rations

LINCOLN — "Urea is a useful and satisfactory substitute for part of the protein supplement in a concentrate mixture for dairy cows," according to P. H. Cole, University Extension dairyman.

"However, concentrate rations containing urea will never be superior to rations providing the same amount of protein from ordinary protein supplements."

"Urea is an organic compound that is made synetheically. It can be used as a feed supplement and contains 42 per cent nitrogen which is equivalent to 262 per cent protein. The dairy cow can utilize this nonprotein nitrogen compound and convert it into protein in the rumen," Cole explains. "One pound of urea and 6 pounds of grain will replace 7 pounds of oil meal."

"Urea fed in excessive amounts may decrease the palatability of a feed and in extreme cases it may be toxic. The recommendation is that urea should not make up more than 3 per cent of the total concentrate ration or more than 10 per cent of the protein supplement part of the concentrate."

When considering the use of urea, Cole suggests keeping the following points in mind:

—Urea provides no energy. Urea is not efficiently converted into protein unless the rumen bacteria have an ample supply of energy.

—Too large an amount of urea in a concentrate mixture may make the mixture unpalatable.

—Urea has little or no value as a protein supplement for dairy calves.

—Urea is best utilized when it is fed along with homegrown grains. Molasses is not a satisfactory substitute for all of the grain.

—If a ration is already sufficiently high in protein there is no point in adding urea to it. Urea is not well utilized by animals if the ration is already high in protein.
