THEN AND NOW.

Some Interesting Changes Noted by New Yorker of 07. In my play along the banks of the Hudson, writes Charles H. Haswell, first chief engineer of the United States Navy, in the New York World, I have seen, as a boy of 7, Robert Fulton's steam vessel, the Clermont, making her trips from New York to Albany, a distance of 145 miles, which she accomplished in thirty-two hours.

Compare, for instance, the present method of reaching Boston by the sound steamers with the method in vogue in 1816, when the trip was accomplished by the steamer Fulton, which required thirty-eight hours for the trip.

A New York and Liverpool line of packets was established in the same year, sailing on the first of each month. The trip was of varied length, according to the weather, but the advertisements of the line claimed twenty-three days for the outer passage and forty for the inner.

The arrival of a vessel in that year was heralded as bring news "forty days later from Europe."

The foreign postal arrangements were very different from those of this time; the bags for European vessels were kept at Tontine Coffee House, on Broadway, where a rate of 25 cents a letter was charged.

Of the more intimate, everyday things of life the changes have been more than remarkable. In 1829 a young gentleman of this city, son of a well-known and respectable resident, returned from a brief trip in Europe with his upper lip adorned with a mustache.

This was the first display of a mustache by an American in this city, and it was so singular and exceptional that it occasioned much comment and criticism. So great was this departure from the customs of our people that it was not until 1836 that such exhibitions, as they were termed, were even tolerated.

The early use of coal was confined almost entirely to parlor grates, the people keeping to the old style fireplace for cooking purposes. About 1820 coal was discovered in Rhode Island, and an enterprising concern in New York sent samples about the town requesting testimonials as to its value.

One Martin S. Wilkins sent in the following certificate: "I am willing to certify that under favorable circumstances this coal is capable of ignition and am willing to further certify that if Rhode Island is underlaid with such coal, at the general configuration which our ministers predict it will be the last place to burn."

The use of ice, except for the purpose of making ice cream, was unknown, and even the latter confection was served at only one place and was unknown to the masses.

Cabs, cafes and hotels, as we know them to-day, supplying every known want, were unknown up to the '30's, although several good taverns, such as the Washington, which was on the site of the present comptroller's office, supplied guests with what at that time was considered sufficient for all the needs of man.

Perhaps more interesting than all these changes is the fact that a person should survive long enough in that city of strife and strenuous to have seen and noted them.

COMMON MAN IS HAPPIEST. If Not Contentious, He Has His Compensation in Life. We have always been compelled to believe that the plain plug of a man is the happiest man in the world after all.

His pants may bag at the knees and he may not be acquainted with the latest style of chin whiskers; he may not hold down a throne or the presidency of a railroad; he may not know the joy of having a brand of socks named in his honor, but as he potters along through life he gets about as much satisfaction out of it as his more distinguished friend.

He knows there is no crank hanging around the corner to shoot a hole through his anatomy or bury a cheese knife up to the hilt in his person. He knows when he sits down to his frugal meal that he can cut his pie with his knife with perfect impunity, for there is no danger of its having been spiked with rough on rats.

No doubt it is lots of fun to be baited whenever you step out on your porch and to have yourself continually misquoted in the newspapers and to know that as you hang up your crown for the night and crawl into your luxurious couch the police force is standing out in your back yard to keep the admiring public from throwing bricks through your window.

But notwithstanding all these ardent joys the common, everyday chap who wears a hickory shirt and a hat that is eight years old gets the most pleasure out of life in the long run.—Horton (Kan.) Commercial.

Always in Style. They were going through the furniture factory.

Mrs. Jones was amazed at the great proportion of chairs. A writer in the Boston Record says she inquired the reason.

"Well, ma'am," responded the ingenious attendant, "you see, it's the dull season, and most of our furniture is out of style, but settin' never really goes out of fashion."

Enjoyment. "What do you most enjoy about us?" "The relief," answered Mr. Jones, "and I got to the end of a hat that nobody has been wearing since Washington Star."

With the possible exception of pajamas, nothing in a man's wardrobe is so ill-fitting and shapeless as a hunting coat.

Hog Cholera is a free germ disease, the germ being first found in the alimentary canal and so long as it is confined in that organ it is comparatively harmless.

When, however, it penetrates the lungs, liver and other organs it causes fermentation, inflammation and destruction of live tissues, furnishing food upon which it thrives and multiplies with wonderful rapidity.

In some cases a generation of an hour, causing death to the animal before the owner has discovered that it was diseased. Thus through reasoning two facts stand out clearly: First, that Hog Cholera cannot be treated successfully unless treatment has commenced before the germ has reached the period of rapid multiplication.

Second, that a germicide must be administered, and therein lies the whole secret. As we pass down the list of various germicides, we are compelled one by one, to reject them, either because of inefficiency or inadaptability until we reach LIQUID KOAL.

And why choose LIQUID KOAL? Because it is the only known germicide that will pass through the stomach into the entire system, and still retain its germicide properties. It is a compound embracing every practical germicide, antiseptic disinfectant property found in coal, treated chemically with an alkaline base, until every objectionable feature is eliminated, being non-poisonous and harmless to animal economy.

It contains cresol and quaiel. It is these hydro-carbon compounds found in smoke that cures a ham, destroying by its germicidal properties all germ life.

Liquid Koal is manufactured by the National Medical Co. E. E. BARRAGER, President. Capital one quarter million. Principal Office, Sheldon, Iowa.

Branches: Minneapolis, Minn., Glendive, Mont., Lewiston, Idaho, York, Nebraska, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.
