

Get the habit and get it right now of putting in all your time minding your own business. You can't reform the world in any better way than to reform yourself first.

The prosperity of a town is not guarded by the wealth of its inhabitants, but by the uniformity with which they pull together when an important undertaking is to be accomplished.

Extracts from a letter written by Julius Mosenhauer, who now resides at his birthplace in Germany:

Hellersen by Ludenichow, Germany, January 2, 1907.

Mr R E Evans,

My Dear Friend:—Today and yesterday the general greeting is "Happy New Year," which I would send to Dakota City, on the shore of the Missouri, if my voice would reach there.

Today it is raining and the snow has settled down. Industry and factories are very busy. The people live, dress and spend more money than was customary in my childhood; there is too much money spent here in saloons, the whole family, together with the children, which of course purifies the atmosphere in general.

The state takes care of all invalid, sick and old people by way of insurance (of course wage earners), one-half pay pays the laborer and one-half the employers, in the way of certain postal stamps put in a book, which is inspected sometimes by an officer, and the employer is fined if he fails to do his duty in putting the stamps in his laborer's book.

Politics at present is at a high pitch here on account of the dissolution of the Reichstag. All parties are active and argue their opinions in the public places in a forcible manner, especially the social-democrats. I am not interested, as a citizen of the U S, and have no business to take sides with any party.

My only brother died on the 23rd of April, in his 75th year. I have two sisters living yet, younger than myself. The climate here is not so warm and cold as in Nebraska. It is a dairy and factory country. Meat is very high—

"Here you are," said the big white man to the clerk of his great office, "this man knows me and will swear it. Then the license was quickly issued and a justice was pulled over and repeating vows of marriage, white and red were promptly wedded.

Then to the plains of Winnebago, far behind the great Missouri, near the line of South Dakota, returned Elizabeth, bronzed and timid; but not as Elizabeth Arnold but as Mrs James Maney, wife of the big, happy white man, owner of a thousand cattle, big chief with his ranchmen people on the broad plains of Nebraska, near the little town of Homer, in the county of Dakota.

The Unique theatre in Sioux City will have the beautiful and sublime Passion Play, in the greatest of motion pictures, for one week commencing Saturday afternoon, January 19th. It is something that is worth going miles to see.
