Rural Mail Patrons Are Expected to Keep Roads Open

Difficult and often impassable road conditions during the past three weeks have prompted the following notice to rural mail route patrons — citations from the postal laws and regulations:

"Rural partons are expected to see that roads are opened after heavy snows so their carriers can travel them. Patrons are advised to take the matter up with the highway officials to keep roads open where ever practicable.

"If portions of the route are impassable, patrons should relocate their boxes temporarily, receive their mail through other patrons' boxes or make some other arrangement for receiving their mail until the roads can be traveled.

"Unless obstructions, including snow, are promptly removed from the approaches to the mail box so carrier can deliver mail without alighting from his vehicle, delivery by carrier may be withheld until approaches have been cleared."

Meanwhile, both rural and city patrons are being urged by postal officials to mail Christmas cards and parcels now to insure delivery before Christmas.
