EXCAVATION SHOWS HOLT COUNTY WAS ONCE THE HOME OF MANY INDIANS

There were questions of tribal rights and territorial division for hunting purposes had to be ironed out. At times, those tribes in dispute were ordered to meet at the line and talk things over. In every case, both sides mustered every warrior available and loaded them down with enough weapons to cow the other side, if possible. If an offered indemnity failed after an infringment was proved, tomahawks slipped out of concealment and there was a battle then and there. It was part of the rules of the game that the first tribe to run away lost the cause for which they fought and that ended the struggle for the desired land or rights.
