SPECIAL LETTER.

of The Chief.

ron, D. C. Nov. 27, 1883.—

now present in Washington

f the Senators and perhaps

f the Representatives. There

rticular reason for our being ld one of these latter, to the

but it is very pleasant place

and we politicians are without pecial occupation, now that the

s are over, until Congress

Ours is a queer trade, or would

it a profession, he laughingly

ued? Yes, much more profes-

an practice, though that is not our fault. We mean well, s, they get

resolutions

cannot carry

a member of

ichigan once who

because he favored a

ternal improvement,

d a government appropri-

move it. But he never got a to present his bill. He was in ongress two years and his longest speech was "aye"; his only other speech one letter shorter, was "no."

In other words, he got a chance to vote but never caught the Speaker's eye to speak his measure. The Speaker had taken his measure in the first place, and as he happened to oppose

the idea, he merely let the Michigan

martyr look in vain for recognition.

The poor man went home to his angry

constituents politically ruined.

Your correspondent finds this member of Congress, with ample leisure to talk and in a happy and content frame of mind, not only amusing, but instructive, as well. I did not interview him, and I will not quote him but his views as to the results of recent political circumstances, and his forecaste of coming events is interesting, just as they dropped from his lips. I sum them up for the sake of brevity in his own concise sentences.

"Butler will brain the democracy in '84," he said, "see if he don't. He is thoroughly mad. He believes he would have been nominated for President and would have got it. But Sullivan and Tilden defeated him. Sullivan turned stomachs of the Bostonese. They all they could do to swallow Boston was becoming famous principally on account of Sullivan and Butler. This hurt the feelings of the bean eaters. A champion physical bruiser and a champion political bruiser were to much to support. The Massachusetts pilgrims sunk beneath the load. In this condition Butler became an easy prey to the wiles of the artful Tilden. This mild, beneficent old gentleman who seems to delight in doing good, sent a force of his emissaries over from New York with a specimen from his "bar'l." The result is Butler beat, and a rising Presidential Candidate consigned to the silent tomb. So they suppose. But Butler will be a political Banquo. He will appear in the National Democratic Convention with his sepulchral garments about him, wrath in his eye, and the ghosts of a working-man's party at his back. He will take a seat at the head of the table and help himself to the turkey, mind if he don't. He will take the "white meat," thank you for his—" here our our jolly improvisator burst into a hearty laugh at the picture he himself drew.

I wish I could give you more of his talk which would fill a volume. I will close, however, with a resume of what he remarked concerning the Speakership. Carlisle and Randall represent the antipodes of democracy. The former is for a vigorous campaign. He will try to put some vitality into the old democratic skeleton. He will make an advance, and indulge in the novelty of a new idea, if he is permited to. He has the mistaken notion that the democratic party has some purpose in its existence except getting office. Now, Randall knows better. By any chance only. "Abuse the republicans," is a good enough platform for him What is tariff legislation? Answer. Something that divided the democratic vote; therefore let it alone. What is an appropriation? Something that takes money, therefore to be opposed on the score of economy. Randall's estimates of his own party sets them down as barren of sense or application of public questions. Carlisle thinks a little better of them. He proposes to emerge from the Jacksonian period. The votes for the Speakership will be a test as to which of these theories will be adopted.

In any case, the democrats are at the end of their success. Butler will put up their headstone next year. The inscription will read: "Here lies Democracy, which died in 1884, of too much Tilden." J.

GOULD COLLEGE.

HARLAN, KANSAS, Nov. 25, 1883.—The steam thresher has been heard whistling through the land, hunting the stray jobs.

Mr. Bennem, the Harlan grain buyer is doing a good business.

The farmers say they do not have to sell their corn at 25c. We glory in their spunk.

The students have been enjoying some very grand sociables.

The literary society has started a paper. It is called the "Alpha Betta Record."

As there are only two weeks of fall term the students are working very hard, preparing for public rhetorical.

Miss Maggie Noble, one of our former students, from near Red Cloud, was in town to-day with her father, making preparations for herself and sisters to enter college. Miss Noble is highly esteemed by all who know her, and they will receive a hearty welcome from the students and citizens of Harlan. G. C.

METHOD OF SCHOOL RECITATION.

Read before Teacher's Association, Nov. 10, 1883, by Miss Eva J. King, of Blue Hill.

Perhaps it would be well to consider some of the objects of recitation before speaking of methods, for methods are but means by which we seek to attain desired ends.

We have many children, and it might be well to add many grown people, believe, that the only object in studying is to acquire the ability to make a good recitation.

We teachers do not believe this, therefore we should teach the children that they do not study merely to recite.

We ought to consider any recitation which merely tests a pupil's preparation of an assigned lesson, as a failure. What then are the objects of recitation? They may be classed as primary and secondary. Primary objects: 1. Instruction imparted by teachers and pupils. 2. Mental, physical, and moral training for the pupil.

Secondary objects: To induce study, to test preparation, to cultivate language, to correct mistaken ideas, to awaken inquiry, to form habits of attention and self-possesion.

The methods by which these objects may be attained are the best methods, are the methods we wish to employ.

This subject is so broad that in a few minutes talk one can but touch upon a few of the leading features. There are millions of methods. The task for the teachers of to-day is, to sift these methods, to separate the wheat from the chaff. Every teacher should have a general plan of procedure for each recitation. Of course the details of this plan will vary from day to day, as the tact and skill of the teacher dictates.

The general plan might be as follows: 1. Assignment of next day's lesson. If this be left until close of recitation, it is often given so hurriedly that if the pupils do not understand the work required of them. 2. General class work, such as discussing questions left over from previous day's lesson, then a talk concerning the lesson for the day. If anyone needs assistance, may have it, if possible, given by the pupils, if not, by the teacher. At this point let both teachers and pupils give all the additional information which they have gleaned from sources other than the regular text book. Such a talk as this, if properly conducted, gives information, cultivates expression, corrects erroneous ideas, wakens thought and helps to form habits of attention. Five of the desired objects for which we are seeking.

Next in order is a recitation of text learned. This recitation may be in any manner desired. Many teachers and, as far as my experience goes, a majority of pupils, prefer to outline their work. We will not pause here to enumerate the reasons why this method is in so many studies, a preferable mode of recitation. If this method be employed, part of the class should be sent to the board to outline the lesson, two or three given special topics, from either advance or review, to write upon, and if the class is large, two or three may be retained for oral work. These oral recitations might sometimes be conducted topically, and sometimes by means of questions and answers. The pupils at the board will by this time have finished their work. Now we have recitations from the outlines, both classes and teachers to criticise each pupil after he is through reciting. Written work next read and closely criticised with regard to spelling, composition and punctuation.

If time allotted for each recitation is of sufficient length, it is well to close with a hasty concert review of topics previously passed over. Such a review should be upon main facts only, and is valuable as a means for fixing them firmly in the pupil's mind.

We spoke of physical and moral training in recitation. They are both important factors. It is not difficult to fix upon a mode of physical training. Of course, constant attention to orderly, systematic movements while going to and from class, and a proper attitude while in class. Lounging should never be tolerated, but each pupil taught to sit erect, to stand alone and in an erect position.

A method for moral training in recitation is not so easy. Can there be any prescribed rule for moral training? I know of none. It seems to me that it should be given only as the exigencies of the situation demand. It can always seem to come in, incidentally, in such a manner as not to lead the child to suspect you of lecturing or preaching. As was stated before, the method or the plan must vary with the work. We all know that somewhat different methods have to be employed in different branches and for different grades. It is equally true and self-evident that the mode must be modified to suit different topics of the same branch in the same grade.

If we but keep the objects of recitation in view and strive faithfully to accomplish something at each recitation, we cannot fail to invent, or at least to adapt to our work good methods. Want, you know, devolops strength. If we feel the want sufficiently we will be able to develop the method, the strength.

MARYATT & CO., Have secured the sole and exclusive sale of the solid gold combination perfume ring, represented herein. It is a beauty, and just the thing for a handsome present for Christmas. It will be a token that will be appreciated by any person. See them before you buy your presents.

The Red Cloud Mills Patent flour is the best thing out in the line of bread stuffs. Even the celebrated Minnesota brands cannot excell it and then there is no freight bill to be added on to the cost price for the consumer to pay. Try it.

A FAMOUS GALAXY.

People who delight in beautiful and good books will be astonished when they see, if they have not already seen, the announcements of the "Caxton Illustrated" and other editions of standard author, issued this season. The typography, and all mechanical qualities of printing and binding are simply superb, and the prices a veritable marvel to the old time book-buyer. The list includes the works, complete, of Dickens, 15 volumes, reduced in price from $22.50 to $.00 net; Thackeray's, from $16.50 to $6.75; George Eliot's, from $12 to $3.75; Washington Irving,s works, from $20 to $4; Scott's Waverley Novels, from $30 to $7.50; Hawthorne's works, from $21 to 6.50; J. Fenimore Cooper's, from $32 to $12.50; Bulwer's, from $31.25 to $8.50. Wm. Black's, from $15 to $4; De Quincey's from $18 to $6.50. The publisher sends them to any one for examination before requiring any payment, on reasonable evidence of good faith, and will send a large catalogue of these and other works free on application. John B. Alden, Publisher, 18 Vesey St., New York.

RUIN WROUGHT IN THE FOREST.

How depressing it is to see acres of a noble forest. How saddening it isalso to see that thin spot in the midst of a noble forest. How saddening it is also to see that thin spot in the midst of your otherwise abundant hair. Stop it at once by the use of Parker's Hair Balsam. For actuaal efficiency this famous aticle stands at the head of its class. Elegant for the toilet, dlicious in odor, and restores the original color to gray or faded haid Ecnomical, as a slight, occasional application keeps the hair and scalp in perfect order.
