ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS.

CRUSHED BY THE CARS.

An Accident Near the Northwestern Round House Last Night.

An awful accident occurred last evening, near the round house of the Northwestern road, in this city, by which a man was run over and killed, his body being horribly mutilated.

The victim was a man named Jacob Ellinger, who manufactured pretzels for sale to lager beer saloons. He had started up town to purchase some flour, when he was run over by a train and killed. His wife was the first one to discover the body, and, with the assistance of a neighbor woman, dragged it off of the track.

A coroner's jury was impanneled, but had not returned a verdict up to the time of writing

This was the second fatal accident on this road yesterday, the first being to a car repairer, who was crushed between two cars at Missouri Valley.

Elevation of Prize Fighting.

Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

The reconciliation of prize fighting with law, by the substitution of the admission money for the stated prize, whereby the manly art of slugging may be exhibited in the regular halls and gardens of entertainment, where the police keep order and see fair play, and where the match may be enjoyed by men of fashion, statesmen, editors, and the common herd of roughs—or, as showmen say in England, by the nobility and gentry—and the handsome honorarium which the sluggers gain in this reformed method, give great promise of the elevation and spread of this distinguished profession, and of its moral influence on the people.

The legal and moral offense of prize fighting was in the fact that it was fought for a stated prize, which was put up by the pugilist himself, if his success in putting up his hands had made him forehanded, but oftener by one or more patriotic persons called backers, who were supposed to take the venture and the lion's share of the prize, or who got even by the finer art of betting, which they usually planted with a sagacious foreknowledge of the outcome. The prize seldom went above $2,000 or $3,000, and was often less. The difference which the new fashion has made in the honorarium to the profession may be seen in the fact that in the recent match between Sullivan and Slade, the best man received $7,000 and the "bested" $4,000.

The receipts of the Sullivan-Mitchell match were even larger. The attendance of statesmen, and millionaires, and society men was then greater. These are now scattered, some to the Yellowstone, some to Saratoga and Newport, some on their inshore yachting cruises. Tug Wilson came over from England, hearing of the American bonanza, and after being "bested" by Sullivan, went back with more money than he could earn by prize fighting in England in the whole period of a prize fighter's life. He went back to retire on his fortune by setting up a "public," which is the occupation to which all good prize fighters go

The prize fight had to be made in the open field, and was generally in a fugitive or nomadic state, because of the officers of the law; therefore, an admission fee could not be charged. Something was made by selling what were called excursion tickets; but the secrecy with which this had to be done made it disreputable, which left the profits small. By leaving out the stated prize, however, and thus gaining for the fight the protection of law, it can come off in the most fashionable places of exhibition, and an admission fee can be charged, which makes the money receipts of a fight greater than of that costliest entertainment, the Italian opera, or than the theater exhibition of an English professional beauty.

This, with the police to keep order, and with private boxes and reserved seats, has eliminated the features which debarred fashionable society from this most attractive of all human entertainments, and has gathered in men eminent in wealth, fashion, the professions, statesmanship, journalism and the stock exchange. The ability to earn thousands of dollars in a few minutes of slugging, even when "bested," must have a powerful effect in propagating men of muscular development, and in multiplying this honorable profession. Barnum has already wrestling in his great moral show; the next step of progress will be knock out matches.

Another particular which has completed the reconciliation of prize fighting to the law is the intervention of what are called soft gloves which do not in any perceptible degree mitigate the severity of the slugging nor the beholder's enjoyment. For example, the accounts of the Sullivan-Mitchell match told of an ecstatic thrill that ran through the vast multitude of spectators as it seemed that the delicate Mitchell would be killed by Sullivan's sledge-hammer blows. It also appears that the gigantic Slade could not be brought up to face them at the last. The gloves, therefore, are technical rather than material, making the affair constructively in law a friendly boxing match, while giving to the spectator the worth of his money in the enjoyment of real bruising match.

People remark with admiration and envy the sums the popular prima donna receives per night. Sometimes they reckon exactly the price she gets per note for her songs at a concert. But popular prima donnas have gone through years of training of a rare gift, and are the few survivors of hundreds that started in. Yet Sullivan gets more money per note of his fist than Patti or Nilsson per bar of their throat notes. If we estimate thirty-five effective hits for Sullivan in his two-and-a-half three-minute rounds, with Slade, he received $200 for each. The probability is that not more than a dozen were effective, which would make the rate $583,33⅓ for each effective blow.

Slade's compensation for taking these effective blows would be $333.33⅓ each, which is probably a faster rate than he could earn money in any other profession except the watering or wrecking of corporation shares. Under such encouragement pugilism may be expected to rise to a prominence as a profession and an intellectual entertainment which has not been before thought possible. As the maxim runs that demand brings supply, and as the propagation of men of muscle is as much a science as that of shorthorns and race horses, the influence of this will be felt where it will do the most good.

The knock-out match is also a match against time, the condition of winning being that the best man shall knock out the other in a given number of three-minute rounds, so badly that he can not come to time. Therefore the best man has to force the fighting with all his might. This concentrates the fighting and the enjoyment of the spectator, so that it becomes intense. Ten seconds are allowed the knocked-down to gather up, and he must face the music till the end of three minutes. The whole time of the Sullivan-Slade mill, including stops, was only eight minutes, whereas the prize-fights sometimes run over an hour, and even two hours. But enjoyment is not measured by time, but by intensity. All grand sensations are brief. The actual slugging time was not more than four or five minutes. In those five minutes the spectators got the concentrated essence of hours of prize-fighting, and an ecstacy of sensibility which repaid their two dollars of admission and the large extras for reserved seats and private boxes, and which outweighed years of ordinary pleasures.

Some things are yet lacking to the completeness of this as a society and national entertainment, which progress will soon supply. Fashion has not made it conventional for women to attend, but this will soon come; and it must come in order to derive the most essential culture therefrom. Women of the highly civilized Roman people attended the gladiatorial exhibitions. Another part still to be supplied, and which must now come, is a fitting place for a large and fashionable assembly. Obviously the amphitheater of the classical Roman peoples is the proper form to furnish choice places for the aristocracy and an unobstructed view to the multitude. Thus will this Republic, departing, leave behind it remains of structures which shall move wonder in the future Ethiopian tourist, as the Coliseum now does that of Cook's personally conducted.

Feeding Sheep.

You must not collect a large number of sheep before you get something for them to eat, and that something must be their natural food. That food is grass—grass that is sodded and perennial. The stomach of a sheep is small, and he eats but little at a time, and wants that little often, and every two or three hours; hence he should be where he can get his own food. The tendency of all kinds of kinds of grain and dry provender is to make sheep unhealthy. A little gain before sending to the shambles is useful to help fatten, but fat itself is a disease and should be avoided so far as possible in all breeding animals; likewise should either extreme, namely, poverty, be avoided. I have seen sheep degenerate from poverty more in one generation than they could have improved in two or three. I have seen much in the papers about sheep loving bitter weed, briars, sassafras and the like, and they are good scavengers for a foul farm. My sheep love the cultivated grass. I remember once to have killed some sossafras with sheep, but I also killed some of my sheep. It was done by confining them too long to food. Sheep need to have their pastures changed at least once a month. And this new pasturage is as much to force them to sleep in a new place as it is to give a variety of food. No sheep can look healthy long that sleeps on the same place and over his own excrement every night.

The Suspender Girl.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Men who never wore suspenders are buying them at the Southern exposition. And they tell their friends about it, and they buy another pair, and it's all on account of the way they are sold. "Here they are, sir," she said, with a sisterly (some fellow's sister) welcome in her pretty face, "any and all kinds of suspenders. Of course you'll take a pair. They'll fit you snugly, and if you've been out to nights they'll brace you up. Wear them three years, and if they rip, tear or stretch, come back and buy another pair. Hard study is making you round shouldered. Take a dose of these suspenders daily and you'll walk the waters like a thing of life. Suppose you perspire—but you're too nice to think of such a dreadful thing—the suspenders will not be affected by it. There is a general wail for these gold-plated silk ones. You won't buy suspenders? Then it must be garters you want. Closed, so, the garter stops circulation, induces lameness, shortens your days and makes the undertaker blossom as the rose. But with this patent encircler the step quickens, the eye brightens and general joy takes possession of the community. And this patent, but pardon me a moment—"

"And you are back again," she beamed on an old gentleman from out of town; "how many pretty things you've bought. Let me tie them up for you. There, now you have them."

"Thank you, miss," smiled the old gentleman. "I'm coming back on the 27th to the agricultural show, and I'll call to see you, sure," and he shook her hand warmly.

A Circuit Broken.

From the New York Sun.

An Italian organ grinder was rendering "The Little Widow Dunn" yesterday in the shade of a telegraph pole in South Fifth avenue. The anthropoid that was attending to the finances of the combination broke his string by climbing once too many times around the lower part of the telegraph pole, and, thus released, he ascended to one of the crossbars. The musician, thinking that the monkey was not attending to business, gave the string a jerk without looking around or stopping the music. The resistance told him that something was the matter. He glanced around, saw that the string was fastened to the telegraph pole, and that his collector had absconded, and asked in a trouble voice:

"Where hi n monka gona?"

Then he saw the children looking toward the top of the pole, he glanced upward. Taking off his hat and swinging it, he addressed the monkey in vigorous Italian.

The monkey looked down upon him loftily, and the rotary musician picked up an empty tomato can, and flourished it in a threatening manner. The monkey retired to the cross-bars, and, apparently to insure himself against being knocked from his perch, grasped a telegraph wire on one side of him, and then carefully reached out with his other arm and took hold of another wire. Suddenly he seemed to lose all interest in the movements of his master, and looked curiously first at one hand and then at the other. Then he let go the wires, and began a minute inspection of the palms of his hands. Having satisfied himself that nothing was the matter with them, he took hold of the wires again and looked down at his master. Then he let go again, inspecting his palms once more, looking around him in a suspecting way, and carefully letting himself down with his tail from the cross-bar, till he could descend the pole. This he did headforemost, and with a look which indicated that he thought it better to fly to ills of which he knew than to endure those the nature of which was a puzzle to him.

Extreme Tired Feeling.

A lady tells us "the first bottle has done my daughter a great deal of good, her food does not distress her now, nor does she suffer from that extreme tired feeling which she did before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." A second bottle effected a cure. No other preparation contains such a concentration of vitalizing, enriching, purifying and invigorating properties as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The First Public Prayer in Denver

Denver News.

Father Dyer, a Methodist minister, now living on the Divide, was the pioneer preacher in Colorado. He will probably offer the opening prayer of the approaching quarter centennial. It is related of Father Dyer that when he first landed in what is now Denver he saw before him a large tent, and to that, supposing a camp-meeting to be in progress, he wended his way. To his astonishment he found—not a camp-meeting, but a very extensive series of games, such as faro, poker, keno, and the like. Going forward he remained about the tent for forty-eight hours, looking very intently upon the progress of the games. At the end of that period he stepped upon a table and said, in a voice loud enough to be heard all about him. "Boys, I have looked at your game now for the past eight-and-forty hours. Now I ask you to give some attention to mine. Let us pray." They had not before known that the solemn-looking man was a minister, but at the invitation hats were taken off, chips were dropped, and all bowed their heads in prayer, with Father Dyer leading. And that was the first public prayer uttered in the Pike's Peak country. After the prayer had been concluded the games were resumed.

RAILROAD EMPLOYERS.

The leading business men of Providence, R. I. compose the Hunt's Remedy Co., and they guarantee all testimonials published by them to be genuine. The following, dated May 4, 1883, from Mr. W. H. Blanchard, Lowell, Mass., is but one of the thousand remarkable cures that are being made by this wonderful medicine. Mr. Blanchard says: "I have been greatly troubled for over six years with acute kidney disease, with severe pain in my back and hips. I was formerly employed on the Boston and Lowell Railroad, but was obliged, owing to the constant jar, to give up the railroad business, as many others have been obliged to do, on account of kidney disease. I have tried many medicines, but received no permanent relief. A friend recommended me to use Hunt's Remedy. I purchased a bottle of one of our druggists in Lowell, and commenced to improve at once, and after using two bottles I was entirely free from all pain, and consider myself cured, and I cheerfully recommend this wonderful medicine, Hunt's Remedy, to all the sufferers from kidney and liver disease"

AT LIBERTY.

For a number of years I was afflicted with kidney and gravel disease, and suffered with pains in my limbs and back at times so severely that it seemed that I could not endure it. I used several so-called cures recommended for these diseases, but they did me no good. A friend of mine who had used Hunt's Remedy, and pronounced it the best in use, urged me to try it, and I purchased a bottle at George E. Hall's drug store in Manchester, and before I had used one bottle I began to feel much better, the pains in the bladder and kidneys were reduced a great deal, and after using five bottles I found that Hunt's Remedy had done all that it was recommended to do. It had removed all the pain, my appetite improved, and I gained several pounds in a few weeks. I have renewed vigor and strength for one of my years (64), and I can only thank the proprietors of Hunt's Remedy for my good health of to-day, and you are at liberty to publish this, that it may be the means of some one being cured by the use of your truly wonderful remedy. 50 Years.

I have known and watched the use of Swift's Specific for over fifty years, and have never known of a failure to cure Blood Poison when properly taken. I used it on my servants from 1850 to 1865, as did also a number of my neighbors, and in every case that came within my knowledge it effected a cure. In all my life I have never known a remedy that would so fully accomplish what it is recommended to do.

H. L. DENNARD, Perry, Ga

I have known and used Swift's Specific for more than twenty years, and have seen more wonderful results from its use than from any remedy in or out of the Pharmacopœia. It is a certain and safe antidote to all sorts of blood poison.

J. DICKSON SMITH, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

The Great Drug House of Chicago.

We do not hesitate to say that for a year past we have sold more of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) than other Blood Purifiers combined, and with most astonishing results. One gentleman who used half a dozen bottles says it has done him more good than treatment which cost him $1,000. Another who has used it for a Scrofulous affection reports a permanent cure from its use.

VAN SHAACK, STEVENSON & CO.

$1,000 REWARD.

Will be paid to any Chemist who will find, on analysis of 100 bottles S. S. S., one particle of Mercury, Iodide Potassium, or any mineral substance.
