But if desired, I am prepared to furnish any of these cheap Pianos and Organs at eastern prices, save freight, provided I am not held responsible. In connection with this I will state that my Organs contain 5 full octaves of Reeds, to one set, and do not call a single octave of reeds, a full set, as advertised by shoddy makers and dealers.

I sell Pianos and Organs on Monthly and Quarterly Payments; also for cash, with small extra discount. Send for circulars. Address

ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS.

DETAILS OF THE DEED.

The Tragedy in Which Holly Lewis, of This City Was Concerned.

He is Held at Des Moines Under Charge of Murder.

The Des Moines Register gives the following further facts concerning the killing of Arthur Fagan in that city, by Holly Lewis, son of J. B. Lewis, of this city, and a young man who is widely and favorably known here:

The murderer and his victim, as has been stated, were both employes of the harness and saddlery house of Mr. N. W. Hunter, corner of Third and Walnut streets. Arthur Fagan, the victim, was head salesman in Mr. Hunter's establishment, having taken charge only four weeks ago, being recommended by the firm of Risser & Reitz, large wholesale dealers of Chicago, (with whom he had been employed for five years) as a first-class man, and was regarded as such by his new employer. N. H. Lewis, the murderer, was formerly in the harness and saddlery business at Marne, in Cass county, having sold out his business at that place some three months ago. He was employed by Mr. Hunter as a harness maker at the bench about five weeks ago, but a few days prior to the commencement of Mr. Fagan's engagement. Of the two men, during their short residence in Des Moines, prior to the occurrence of this unfortunate affair, nothing but good is known or can be said. They occupied a room and bed together at the boarding house of Mrs. Volrath. On Monday Mr. J. T. Davis, of Bloomfield, Iowa, a cousin of Fagan, came to the city to attend the state fair, and Lewis was requested to give up his part of the bed to Mr. Davis during the fair, and take a cot in another part of the house, which the landlady had agreed to furnish him. To this proposition Lewis objected, and peremptorily declined to give up his bed. Between 11 and 12 o'clock Monday night Fagan and Davis went to the room and found Lewis in bed and undressed. Some angry words ensued between Fagan and Lewis, the latter still refusing to yield. Davis and Fagan then went out for a walk. During their absence Lewis arose and put on his pants, boots and vest and took a shoe-knife, which Fagan had brought to the room, and placed it in his hip pocket, and then went to bed and covered up, concealing his clothing. When Fagan and Davis returned they found Lewis still in bed, and some further words ensued between Fagan and Lewis, the former finally taking hold of the latter by the arm as if to pull him out of bed. Making a second pull in this manner, Lewis jumped from the bed, drew the deadly knife and plunged it to the hilt into Fagan's heart. Fagan died in a few minutes afterward. Medical aid was summoned, but he was dead before it arrived. Knowing escape impossible Lewis went to police headquarters, gave himself up and is now in jail. There were two witnesses to the affair—Mr. Davis, the cousin of the murdered man, and Mr. Charles Townsend, an employe of Mr. Hunter and a boarder at the house. A coroner's jury was empanneled and returned a verdict of murder in the first degree.

The body of the murdered man was taken charge of by Mr. Davis, and conveyed to Watsega, Ill., where his parents reside.

The murderer, N. H. Lewis, we learn, is a native of Council Bluffs, and has always been regarded as a peaceable and quiet boy, working steadily in his father's harness shop, Mr. J. B. Lewis, a man of very high standing in Council Bluffs, having served as alderman from his ward for several years. He is an only son, but 23 years old, and respected by all who knew him.

ADDITIONAL FACTS, ETC.

From other sources it appears Fagan began pounding young Lewis with a club, as the latter lay in bed, and that it was not until after this was done that Lewis used the knife upon him. It will be very difficult to convince his many friends here, who have known Lewis from childhood, that he would ever attack a man unless justified to do so. He has borne an excellent character for industry and peaceableness. He learned his trade here, his father, J. B. Lewis, being a saddler, and has previous to going to Des Moines, been running a harness shop at Marne, Cass county. During the hunt for the Polk City murderers he took an active part, and was standing next to Maddy when the latter was fatally shot. Afterwards he was appointed by the citizens to solicit funds for the relief of Maddy's family, and he canvassed this city recently for that purpose.

Ready For Relief.

The fire lads barely missed an excursion to Defiance, a new town on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. Chief Templeton received a telegram from the mayor of that place early yesterday morning, asking for help, as the town was burning up. He interviewed Mayor Bowman, who told him to go, and the Rescue steamer and hose cart went to the depot to take a special train, but another telegram came saying the fire was under control, and the engine was not needed. Defiance is a small town which has sprung into being like magic, and most of the buildings were hastily built, and frame structures, burning quickly.

Lynn, Mass., always was a good place for health, but it has become a modern Bethesda since Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham of 233 Western Avenue, made her great discovery of the Vegetable Compound, a panacea for the principal ills that afflict the fair creation. This differs, howeverr from the ancient scene of marvelous cures in this important particular: The healing agent, with all its virtues, can be sent to order by express or mail over the world.

THE ELECTRIC EXHIBITION AT VIENNA.

A Musical Telephone—Telelegraphy Perfected—Medical Instruments.

Cor. London Telegraph.

The telephone, in its manifold varieties and shapes, constructed according to this or that inventor, is to be found in almost every nook and corner of the building. I must say a few words concerning the very skilful arrangement by which the Wiener Privat Teleglafen Gesellschaft has provided for the enjoyment of all music-loving visitors. In one of the galleries eight curious-looking, gayly-decorated windowless little huts have been erected, communicating with the outer world by a thick, heavy door which closes hermetically. The interior is lighted from above. The telephones attached to the walls communicate with the Imperial opera house, whence the sound is conducted through subterranean wires for a distance of four or five miles. A few nights ago an experiment was made in this department, in the presence of his imperial highness Crown Prince Rodolph. The soft tones of "O celest' Aida" and the clang of the trumpets in the triumphal march were transmitted with a precision and clearness probably never yet attained in any of the similar experiments heretofore made. Other wires connec the telephone huts with the popular concerts given every evening in Vienna, so that by crossing over from one of these little musical dens to the other we may be transported from the melancholy wail of a Wagnerian funeral march to the merry strains of one of Strauss's waltzes.

In the central hall of the Rotunda to the right, around a graceful yet plain pavillion of stained oak, surmounted by the Union Jack, is the English exhibition. The pavilion is most tastefully decorated. Surrounding it is the general postoffice exhibit. So far as it has been displayed it is by no means a large one, and contrasts, I regret to say, most unfavorably with that of other countries, and more especially with that of France. A little further on, the Gutta Percha Company (London) has a large showcase, containing specimens of submarine and subterranean cables, telegraph and telephone wires, covered with the company's special product, in a manner which isolates and protects them most efficaciously. One of the greatest of electrical inventions, Sir William Thomson's syphon recorder and mirror instrument, is exhibited by the Eastern telegraph company. This delicate apparatus, now so well known in scientific circles, is used not only in the offices of the company itself, but over the entire globe, wherever extreme refinement and accuracy are required. The Crossley telephone company (Bradford) show all the modern improvements in their own branch; the Electro-Dynamic company (London and Philadelphia), electro-motors for industrial purposes; the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance company, specimens of the cables of which they have laid thousands of miles under sea and land.

The French Postal and Telegraphic Department has sent to Vienna the tasteful kiosk made for the Paris Exhibition of 1881. It is placed on a platform immediately opposite the principal entrance. Under the flooring are 1,200 or 1,500 cells, composing the powerful batteries required for the ingenious apparatus displayed. Here may be seen telegraphy perfected, apparently, to the utmost limit. Not only is the language of man conveyed over thousands of miles in a few seconds, but his very handwriting, and the drawing he puts on paper, are transmitted letter for letter and line for line from one point to another. The French war office exhibits complicated instruments for measuring the speed of projectiles, for the exact estimate of the force of recoil of guns and rifles, etc. The navy, the colonies, the departments of commerce and public instruction are all represented. Among other curious instruments is an electric scale, invented by M. Becquerel, dispensing with the use of weights. The amount of electro magnetic force necessary to keep the needle of the scale at its center corresponds on a dynamometer to the weight. The Chemin de Fer du Nord has set up a miniature railroad, practically demonstrating their improved systems of bell and light signalling and the working of switches and gates with safety and precision by electricity. The Chemin de Fer du l'Est shows how, by electric clocks connected with each other, an absolutely uniform time can be kept throughout their extensive range of traffic. Dr. Boudet, of Paris contributes scientific apparatus of much importance. In medicine, sound is infinitely more diagnostic value than sight. Acting on this principle, or, more accurately speaking, the microphone, to instruments which heretofore transmitted but imperfectly to the observer's ear those sounds that invariably accompany many organs of the human body in their functions, and which in their slightest variations impart much information to the experienced physician. Doctor Boudet has now invented a stethoscope so delicate that the murmurs heard with each beat of the heart are transmitted with the greatest accuracy, rendering perfectly appreciable the most trifling deviation from the normal; the soft breezy sound of the air passing through the minute tubes of the lungs cannot undergo the slightest change without being easily detected by the instrument. Doctor Boudet's sphygmophone records the flowing of the blood as it rushes through the arteries, and his myphone renders audible the crisp, crackling sound caused by a muscle as it contracts. Altogether the French exhibition is a most complete and remarkable display of the innumerable applications of electricity.

Glad to Hear it.

"For several months I endured a dull pain through my lungs and shoulders, lost my spirits, appetite and color, and could with difficulty remain from my bed. My present healthful condition is due to Burdock Blood Bitters." Mrs. E. A. Hall, Binghampton, N. Y.

EXPRESSMEN LIABLE.

Mr. A. S. Merrill, the popular expressman of Brunswick, Me., writes us on May 15, 1883, as follows: "Having been severely afflicted for about two years with inflamation of the kidneys and bladder, so called by my physicians, I suffered with distressing pains in my back and retention of urine, caused by a stoppage of the neck of the bladder, and a complication of other diseases. I was hardly able to attend to my business and at times would be completely prostrated. I was also affected with incontinence of urine to an alarming degree; indeed, it demanded my attention fifteen or twenty times per night, and at times it would seem impossible for me to ride down to the depot on my wagon, for every jar from the wagon would almost seem to take my life. Having failed to obtain relief from my doctor, I finally consulted our druggist, Dr. Merryman, of Brunswick, and requested him to furnish me with the most reliable and speedy cure for such sickness, for I was suffering too much for human nature to endure long. The doctor recommended me to use Hunt's Remedy, as it had been used with remarkable success in a good many cases in Brunswick and vicinity. I purchased a bottle, and received such great relief that I continued, and had not used two bottles before began to improve beyond my expectations. The pains in my kidneys and loins disappeared. I gained strength, and my water began to pass naturally, and I was able to sleep soundly, and obtain the greatly needed rest which for a long time I could not. I am fully restored to health, and can attend to my business. Thanks to Hunt's Remedy for my restoration, and I highly recommend it to all who are troubled with kidney complaints."

COULD NOT LIFT A POUND.

The above are the words of Mrs. Harriet Bailey, of Putnam, Conn. She writes May 3, 1883: "I have been troubled with kidney and bladder disease for two years. I suffered severely in the back and loins. Before taking your wonderful medicine, Hunt's Remedy, I could not lift a pound. After giving it a fair trial, I began to improve, and can now truly say it was a 'Godsend to me,' and I am now able to do my household work and enjoy the best of health. I have recommended Hunt's Remedy to two of my neighbors, who have been greatly benefitted by it. This letter I send voluntarily, with the hope that it will be the means of inducing some sufferer to use Hunt's Remedy, and be cured as I have been."

Swift's Specific

Is not a triumph of science, but is a revelation through the instinct of the untutored savage, and is a complete antidote to all kinds of Blood Poison and Skin Humors.

Swift's Specific has cured me of Scrofula, which is hereditary in my family. I have suffered with it for many years, and have tried a great many physicians and all sorts of treatment, but to no purpose; and when I began to take Swift's Specific I was in a horrible condition, but thanks to this great remedy, I am rid of the disease. There is no doubt that it is the greatest medicine in existence, and I hope any who doubt will write to me.

E. C. HAWES, Jr., Clarksville, Ga.

After suffering twenty-five years with a painful dry tetter, and trying many physicians, I was at last relieved by the use of Swift's Specific, and cheerfully commend it to all similarly afflicted.

$1,000 Reward will be paid to any Chemist who will find, on the analysis of 100 bottles S. S. S., one particle of Mercury, Iodide Potassium, or any mineral substance.
