U. S. CUSTOM HOUSE.

(Illustrated, 4th page).

Like all public buildings erected by the National Government, the Omaha Custom House and Postoffice is a handsome and solid structure. The building was completed in 1876. Its dimensions are 66 by 122 feet, three stories high and a mansard roof. It is built of Cincinnati free stone, and is the most substantial looking building in the city. In the basement is the heating apparatus which warms the whole building. The first floor is occupied by the postoffice. The second is occupied by the revenue and customs officers, United States Marshal, United States Attorney, and an elegant chamber for United States Judges. The third story is taken up by the United States Court-room, jury rooms and United States Clerk's office. The mansard is occupied by the United States Railway Mail Service, etc. The cost of this building was $315,000, and improvements since its completion have increased the cost to $340,000.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

The headquarters of the internal revenue collection district for the State of Nebraska and the territory of Dakota is located in this city, Hon. George W. Post, Collector. There are five employes in the office, six storekeepers and five deputies. The heaviest receipts are from the Willow Springs Distillery, in this city, which pays taxes approximating very nearly to $1,500,000 a year, and a smaller distillery at Nebraska City, which returns about $500,000. The receipts for 1884 have been as follows:

Jan.	$ 128,156.76	Aug.	$ 74,858.12
Feb.	92,350 03	Sep.	114,728.92
Mch.	124,354 63	Oct.	152,411.46

May	160,492.69	Decies	200,000.00
June	144,459.61
July	83,235.06	Total	$1,599,656.75

Office deputies: E. M. Battis, H. A. Doud, C. B. Allen, J. D. Evans. Six other deputies throughout the districts.

Office of surveyor of customs at Omaha: Jno. Campbell surveyor. J. N. Phillips deputy. Total duties collected 1884, $12,000.

Office of chief clerk of railway mail service: A. W. Griffin, chief clerk. Ninety-seven postal clerks with headquarters at Omaha.

UNITED STATES COURT.

Two terms of the Federal courts are held in Omaha, one on the first Monday of May and the other on the second Monday of November of each year. A third term is held in Lincoln, the capital of the State, on the first Monday of January.

These circuit and district courts are composed as follows: Hon. Samuel F. Miller, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court; Hon. David J. Brewer, Judge of the United States Circuit Court, and Hon. Elmer S. Dundy, Judge United States District Court. The officers are: G. M. Lambertson, Lincoln, United States Attorney; E. M. Bartlett, Omaha, assistant; Ellis L. Bierbower, Omaha, Marshal; R. E. Allen and Alfred G. Hastings, Lincoln, deputies; Elmer D. Frank, Omaha, Clerk of the Circuit Court; Elmer S. Dundy, Jr., Omaha, Clerk of the District Court, and Hon. John L. Webster, Omaha, Master in Chancery.

Oculists and Aurists.

DR. L. B. GRADDY.

This eminent oculist and aurist is almost too well known in this part of the west to need special mention, but the omission of his name in connection with the skillful in our review of the professional gentlemen of Omaha, would be nothing short of a breach of justice. Dr. Graddy is the pioneer in the west in this branch of science and among the skillful surgeons he takes the lead. It is only justice to say that he unquestionably has no superior in the west in the treatment of the eye and ear. The advantages of the great west, where superior surgical skill, particularly in the treatment of the eye and ear, was comparatively unknown, induced Dr. Graddy, after long and careful training in the eye and ear hospitals of Europe, to settle in Omaha, the natural commercial center of the new west. After more than four years of unparalleled success, his patients represent all parts of the west and states contiguous to Nebraska.

J. T. ARMSTRONG.

One of the special facilities in the treatment of the sick, which has made this city an objective center for the suffering, is the location here of Dr. J. T. Armstrong, the oculist and aurist, whose office is at 1503 Farnam street. Dr. Armstrong is consulted daily upon some of the severest cases of eye and ear trouble from people of the surrounding states as well as those of Nebraska. Four years of general practice in Iowa, together with his specialty of the eye and ear, since adopted, has made him well known in that state, and his success won him the confidence of the people there. Since his location in this city nearly two years ago, he has established himself as fixed in the confidence of the people here. His treatment has been so remarkably successful that those who have always considered it necessary to seek the Eastern cities for relief or cures of diseases of the eye and ear, have now learned that here, as well as there, such can be had, and much expense saved.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS.

The building has an east and south front, with an entrance on each, and a porch running around the sides. The interior finishing is perfect in its way; the reception hall is finished in oak, as also the dining room; the drawing room is finished in chestnut, the kitchen in ash, and the main hallway in cherry. The building is three stories high and it will cost between $27,000 and $28,000.

FRANK COLPETZER'S RESIDENCE.

(Illustrated page 4).

This new addition to the noticeably fine examples of domestic architecture in Omaha is one of the largest and most conspicuous residences in the city. Its style is what may be considered a modern adaptation of the Queen Anne school. The building is a two-story frame with high attic, and is located on the corner of Twenty-fifth and Douglas streets, having two fronts—east and south—former containing the main entrance. The interior is finished in a very neat and attractive manner, the main staircase and staircase screen being elaborately carved, the latter showing magnificent specimens of wood and open arabesque work. The drawing room is finished in Spanish cedar. It is 34 feet in length, and an octagonal bay window opens from the main front. The dining room is finished in red oak, is exceedingly cheerful, being well lighted by a fireside bay window and enlarged transoms. At one end of the room is a recessed sideboard, 9x9, and opposite the entrance is an arched alcove wherein is a capacity modelled mantel. This room is separated from the kitchen by a spacious butler's pantry. In the front portion of the second story are four large sleeping chambers. The finish and appointments are perfect in every particular, water and steam being provided in all parts of the house. The generating machinery for the latter is located under the stables some distance from the dwelling. The cost of the building was over $25,000.

STRANG'S BUILDING.

(See illustration 4th page.)

The four-story, iron front building erected by A. L. Strang, on the corner of Tenth and Farnam streets, is a metropolitan structure that would be a credit to any of the principal cities of the country. The exterior of the building is very imposing.

The block is four stories in height, 66 feet front on Farnam and 132 feet on Tenth street. It is supplied with all the modern conveniences, including hydraulic elevators. The basement and entire first story is occupied by the A. L. Strang Co., with water and steam supplies. The upper stories are occupied as headquarters of the department of the Platte. They are divided into elegant and commodious offices, in which are located the various officers of the department staff.

The building is constructed throughout in the most substantial manner. The cost of the structure is $30,000.

THE ARMY.

Omaha has been the headquarters of a military division known as the "Department of the Platte," since 1865. This department includes Nebraska, Wyoming, Utah and a portion of Dakota. A large share of the commercial and financial supremacy of Omaha in the Missouri valley is due to the heavy purchases and distribution of military supplies at this point, and the handling of the quartermaster, commissary and paymaster funds of the department by our banks. In 1872 the national government acquired 82½ acres of land on the plateau two miles north of this city. Upon this tract was established what is known as Fort Omaha. Over $300,000 has been expended in buildings and upon improvements of these grounds. The quarters for soldiers have accommodated from two to fourteen companies of troops of various grades each winter. The dwellings for officers are neat and commodious, and the store houses plain and substantial. The grounds are tastefully laid out. An abundant water supply has been secured by the building of a system of water works.

The present commander of the department is Brig. General O. O. Howard, with headquarters in Strang's building, corner Farnam and Tenth streets.

Personal staff—First Lieut. Joseph A. Sladden, 14th infantry, aide de camp, and First Lieut. Guy Howard, 12th infantry, aide de camp.

Department Staff—Major Joseph H. Taylor, Assistant Adjutant General, Omaha, Nebraska; Lieutenant Colonel Edwin C. Mason, Fourth Infantry, Acting Assistant Inspector General, Omaha Nebraska; Lieutenant Colonel Bryce B. Burnham, Deputy Judge Advocate General, Judge Advocate of the Department, Omaha, Nebraska; Major George B. Dandy, Quartermaster, Chief Quartermaster, Omaha, Nebraska; Major John P. Hawkins, Commissary of Subsistence, Chief Commissary of Subsistence, Omaha, Nebraska; Lieutenant Colonel John E. Summers, Surgeon, Medical Director, Omaha, Nebraska; Major Thadeus H. Stanton, Paymaster, Chief Paymaster, Omaha, Nebraska; First Lieutenant Dan C. Kingman, Corps of Engineers, Engineer Officer, Omaha, Nebraska; First Lieutenant Orin B. Mitcham, Ordnance Department, Chief Ordnance Officer, and C. O. Cheyenne Ordnance Depot, Cheyenne, Wyoming; Major Alfred T. Smith, Seventh Infantry, Inspector of Rifle Practice, Omaha, Nebraska.

The depot now located in the fire proof and brick building erected by the government at a cost of $30,000 on the grounds west of the Union Pacific depot, is in charge of Capt. Chas. A. H. McCauley, assistant quartermaster U. S. A. The territory embraced in its operations covers a large area but the facilities for handling supplies and quartermaster stores are ample and all the requirements have been promptly met.

During the year troops and supplies transported from this depot as follows:

Officers and men 511, Horses 191, subsistence stores 3,579,189 lbs., Quartermaster stores 35,140,414 lbs., Ordnance 1,330,620 lbs., medical stores 144,827 lbs., miscellaneous 496,454 lbs. Transportation between Omaha depot and Fort Omaha by wagon trains 4,802,700 lbs.

Physicians and Surgeons.

C. M. G. BIART.

An interesting feature in the additional facilities to the advantages in Omaha of the medical profession, is the advent here of the skillful specialist, Dr. C. M. G. Biart. He is located in Crounse block, 16th and Capitol avenue, which is very convenient to the transient public seeking his services. His practice is limited to the diseases of the skin, in which he is remarkably successful. People troubled with distressing skin diseases such as salt rheum, moles, warts, superfluous hair, etc., have found Dr. Biart a blessing to them. His skill in this direction is much needed in this state and satisfies the wants of a people who have hitherto been obliged to seek such a specialist.

Seeds.

J. EVANS.

The seed house of J. Evans at 1402 Dodge street established since 1867, is thoroughly known throughout the west. It is the only exclusive seed house west of the Missouri river and carries a full stock of garden seed, blue grass, timothy, red, white and alfalfa clover and every variety of seeds grown. His stock is kept fresh and purchased direct from professional seed growers. He issues an annual seed catalogue.

Barbers.

LOUIS FAIST.

Louis Faist has removed his shop to Frenzer block, opposite postoffice, and generally enlarged by putting in seven Archer's patent chairs. His increased business demanded this change. He has now the largest and best shop in the city. In the spring he will put in bathing rooms.
