The Main Infirmary and the Nebraska School of Magnetism Now Omaha.

THE KHARAS INSTITUTIONS.

The Nebraska Magnetic Infirmary and the Nebraska School of Magnetism, together with headquarters for Iowa and Nebraska, have been removed from Nebraska City to 1515-1517 Chicago street, Omaha, Neb., occupying the large building facing Jefferson Park—one of the very best locations in Omaha. Another change has been made also: The matron, formerly Miss Emma Worman, became, on St. Valentine's Day, Mrs. Emma Kharas. Prof. and Mrs. Kharas and their able assistants will make Omaha a Mecca for people who have long sought relief for chronic and so-called incurable diseases and have found no cure until they tried Magnetic Healing combined with Osteopathy, or the Kharas System of Magnetic Treatment. Mrs. Kharas will have charge of the ladies' department, and she and her assistants will treat especially the diseases peculiar to women. Many diseases which have long been considered incurable without resorting to the dreaded surgeon's knife will be cured by this method with the use of drugs or surgery. Call, or write, describing your case, to either Prof. or Mrs. Kharas, and you will receive the information you desire without cost. Treatment and instruction in this new science at reduced rates to all who come within the next fifteen days.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

BRITISH SOLDIER SEES ANGELS.

Here is a story which is printed in a London publication called 'In South Africa.'

"Johanensburg, December, 1899.—In the battle of Dundee, on the 20th of October, 1899, one of the Transvaal burghers met with a heavily wounded Hussar lying on the veldt. When the burgher, who was on horseback, passed the Hussar, the wounded man cried out for water.

"On this the burgher, whose name was Rotha, handed him his field bottle. The man, however, was too weak to take the bottle in his hands. Whereupon Rotha dismounted and gave him to drink.

"The man looked at him thankfully and said, 'Thanks!' and then asked him in English, 'Who were those two valiant generals who rode continually one on each side of the Transvaal army, encouraging the men and giving orders? They were dressed in white uniforms and rode on white horses carrying a flag in their hands. I did not know the flag,' added the Hussar. 'Oh, how we fired on them!' he said, dreamily, 'but it was all in vain. The best shot could not hit them.'

"The Transvaal burgher said that he knew nothing of there generals; he had never seen them in the field. 'Indeed, we have no general dressed in white!' "Then it must have been angels,' said the Hussar.

"He whispered something like 'Davis, old fellow!' looked at Rotha bewildered and fell back, dead.

"Rotha went his way musing over the words:

"'For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways.'

The editor of the publication comments on the story as follows:

I print, just as I received it from a correspondent in Holland, the story of an episode of the war which will be remembered long after the confused narrative of defeats and retreats has perished in oblivion. In the Second Book of Kings it is written that when Elisha was being pursued by the hosts of the King of Syria the prophet feared not; but his servant was sore afraid.

"The Lord opened the eyes of the young man, and he saw; and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha."

In the book of the prophet Zechariah the prophet tells how he saw in a vision a man riding on a red horse, and behind him were three red horses, speckled and white. And this celestial visitors that talked to Zechariah said unto him: "These are they whom the Lord hath sent to walk to and fro thro' the earth."

If so be that the eyes of the dying Hussar or Lancer were opened like those of Elisha's servant, why should not he see the white horsemen of the Lord riding in the ranks of the brave burghers who are defending their fatherland.

There is nothing better known in English literature than Macauley's splendid lay commemorating just such an apparition as this at the battle of the Lake Regillus. When that battle was wavering in the balance the radiant white horsemen, whom the Romans were prompt to recognize as Castor and Pollux, the twin sons of Jupiter, placed themselves at the head of the Roman cavalry and swept the Latins from the field. The triumph thus gained put an end to the attempts of the Tarquins to regain their lost ascendancy in Rome. Who that once heard it can ever forget the spirit-stirring lay that ells him when Aulus the Dictator was buckling tighcter Black Auster's band.

That he was aware of a princely pair
That rode at his right hand.
So like were they, no mortal
Might one from the other know.
White as snow their armor was,
Their steeds were white as snow.
Never on earthly anvil did such
Rare armor gleam.
And never did such gallant steeds
Drink of an earthly stream.

Then spoke up brave Aulus, and challenged the strange white horsemen to say from whence they came. They replied, as mayhap the white horsemen of Dundee might have done had the Hussar hailed them across the veldt:

By many names men call us;
In many lands we dwell;
But by the proud Eurotas
Is our dear native home,
And for the right we come to fight
Before the ranks of Rome.

The cause for which the great Twin Brethren fought at Lake Regillus was the same as which the generals served on the stricken field of Dundee. The White Horsemen fight only for the right!

Then like a blast away they passed,
And no man saw them more.

SENORA AGUINALDO A PRISONER.

Senora Emilio Aguinaldo was a Christmas present to the United States, says a Manila correspondent of the Post-Dispatch. Perhaps it would be better to say a Christmas seizure, for it was on last Christmas day that the wife of the insurgent leader was captured by American soldiers and turned over to General Otis. With her were taken her young son, her sister, Colonel Sityar, his two daughters, Colonel Paez and Lieutenant Pedro Cristobal of Aguinaldo's staff. The gunboat Wheeling landed them at Manila January 5, and they were at once taken to the American headquarters. General Otis provided Senora Aguinaldo, her sister and the Senoritas Sityar with carriages, and they were allowed to remain, under guard, with their own people. They were quartered at No. 11 Calle San Jose, where they have been ever since. With the party is Senora Aguinaldo's mother.

Calle San Jose is not a fashionable street. No Spaniards or Americans reside there; hence, it is considered bourgeois. But there are some handsome residences there, and No. 11 is one of them.

The house does not make much of a showing from the street, but in this it is deceptive. In any event, it will remain historic as the refuge of the wife, son and mother of Emilio Aguinaldo, when they were captured by the United States troops. The lower floor is a carriage house, as is the case with all Philippine houses of any pretensions whatever. The place is carefully guarded by American soldiers—one at each corner of the house in front, one at the front door and another inside at the bottom of the stairway leading to Senora Aguinaldo's apartments.

No. 11 Calle San Jose is a nest of insurgents and insurgent sympathizers. Numerous natives throng the street in front of the house, all anxious to see the senora. Some of them have an opportunity to see her, and some do not. It all depends on their business, which the guards are careful to investigate before permitting the so-called amigos to ascend the stairs. These guards announce the arrival of visitors to the landlady, Senora Ilario. The landlady meets the guards at the turn in the stairs, and animated and earnest parleys take place between them. The landlady is a Mestiza and an Aguinaldo sympathizer. Hence, she wishes only the friends of the little chieftain to be admitted to the presence of the little chieftain's wife.

Senora Aguinaldo wears diamond earrings. Otherwise she greatly resembles the ten thousand Filipino women who none may see on the streets of Manila. She is inclined to embonpoint, and her face is the round, fat, dusky, uninteresting face of the average native of Luzon's isle. Her hair is long and black—but all Filipino women have an abundance of hair. Her eyes are large and lustrous—typical Filipino eyes. Her hand is the long, slender, fascinating hand characteristic of the pure-blooded Filipino. Her age? Probably 35 years.

Before her husband became a rebel Senora Aguinaldo rode through the streets of Manila in a victoria drawn by two black native ponies. The trials and tribulations which have followed the Aguinaldos would tend to render expressionless and apathetic the face of a woman from whom one might expect vastly more than from this untutored native—for the wife of the erstwhile little president can neither read nor write. She can speak neither English nor Spanish. She is familiar with the Tagalog dialect only, but has gathered a few Spanish phrases.

Recently two American women, wives of army officers here, called at No. 11 Calle San Jose and were admitted to see Senora Aguinaldo. To them she expressed more feeling when they wished for a speedy reunion of her family than on any other point. She talked of her Emilio; she said that she had followed him over hill and dale; that she had been with him in his successes and in his reverses, and, to her, he is the loving husband, the intrepid fighter, the great chieftain. She told of her home life, and of the little Miguel who stood by her bedside and gazed with inquiring eyes at the American visitors.

The American women met Sendra Aguinaldo as woman meets woman, and they extended to her their sympathy as one woman to another who is in the depths of sorrow and distress. The American women asked no leading questions. They did not inquire concerning the whereabouts of Emilio Aguinaldo, and she did not vouchsafe the information. But the conversation drifted on, and the senora told of the baby daughter whose grave is among the northern hills and of the senora's own heartaches and future hopes.

Senora Aguinaldo has been, and is, loyal to her husband and his cause. She still believes in him and loves him, and her affection is all the deeper and tenderer because his cause is doomed; because he has fallen from his high estate, because his aspirations and ambitions never shall be realized.

As her visitors departed they expressed a wish for a speedy solution of the trouble in the Philippine islands. The face of the senora lighted with a smile as she whispered, "Gracias, gracias, senoras!" in acknowledgment, but it was a smile that spoke more of tears than joy.

BRUIN BROKE AWAY.

Wolcott, N. Y.—(Special.—A cinnamon bear created consternation in Alton, a hamlet ten miles west of here, a few days ago.

Two men named Marceena and Meeler arrived from the west at the Alton school house and started to amuse the children during the noon intermission with a bear dance. For some reason the bear was angry and obstinate, and by a sudden swing of his head tore the iron ring from his nose.

As the blood trickled down he lapped it up and immediately became frenzied. He sprang at his owners, who climbed to the roof of a barn. The children ran screaming into the school building, but two little girls fainted and fell in the entry. The teacher with a broom kept the bear at bay until they were dragged inside, when she closed and bolted the door.

Landlord C. M. Gimpse of the Alton hotel drove by at this juncture and bruin attacked him. His horse ran away and completely demolished a new top cutter. Glimpse crawled out of a snowdrift to see the bear coming open-mouthed and snarling ferociously. He fell over a high stone wall and the bear rushed on, disappearing in a tract of forest land.

On the night following the afternoon on which the head escaped a farmer named Gurnee left his house to take in the carcass of several hogs he had butchered that morning. He saw the largest "Newfoundland dog" he had ever seen come around the corner of the corn crib and perform the undog-like act of shouldering the biggest hog, after which he marched off on his hind legs.

Gurnee threw a stone at the dog, which droped thpe hog and ran at him. The farmer entered the house a half a neck to the good.

By this time he had dropped the dog theory. Dashing out of another door he ran to the next house and borrowed a rifle. Coming back he saw the strange beast and his pork disappearing through the orchard. He fired, but the bear kept on at a lumbering trot.

For two days, Mr. Mitchell says, the excitement kept increasing. Finally the bear's owners tracked him to his temporary lair in the heart of a tamarack swamp south of Great Sodus bay. Nearly a hundred boys and men, all armed, joined them, and at sundown they surrounded the bear and captured him.

Cancer of Breast.

Greenmount, Sou. Dak., March 2, '98.
Dr. E. O. Smith, Kansas City, Mo.
My Dear Doctor:—It gives me sincere pleasure to inform you of the safe return home of my dear wife, who arrived Saturday, the 26th ult., perfectly restored to health and happiness.
In restoring my wife to health you have brought pleasure and happiness to our entire household, for which it is needless to say that we are truely grateful. It also gives me sincere pleasure to tender to you our grateful thanks for your great kindness to my wife while under your treatment, for which we will always hold you and your truly good wife in grateful esteem. In conclusion we can only pray that an all kind Providence will bless, protect and keep you in His holy care through life, and, in death bless you with a happy eternity. Gratefully yours,

A Prominent Attorney Cured of Cancer of the Ear.

Oberlin, Kas., July 27, 1898.
Dr. E. O. Smith, Kansas City, Mo.
Dear Sir and Friend:—I am O. K. I never felt better in my life, than since my return home whereas before that I was troubled in body and mind for several months. I am now able to hold up my end at the office and at home about the orchard. We are all well and I wish to be particularly remembered to Mrs. Smith.
Fraternally your friend,
G. WEBB BERTRAM.

Suffered 17 Years—Cured in 13 Days.

Phillips' Grv. Kan., Nov. 23, 1899
Dr. E. O. Smith, Kansas City, Mo.
Dear Sir:—I had been afflicted for seventeen years with epithelial cancer when I applied to you for treatment. In thirteen days I was entirely cured and without the use of knife. I make this statement for the benefit of cancer sufferers, hoping they may be influenced by my testimony to go to you for treatment.
Yours Truly, N. BUSTON.

Other Doctors Failed to Cure Him.

Prairie Home, Mo., Nov. 12, 1899.
Dr. E. O. Smith, Kansas City, Mo.
Dear Sir:—It is with pleasure that I state that your treatment of a cancer on my lower lip was a complete success. It was of about four years standing and for a year I had taken treatment of other doctors, but to no avail. I came to you and you cured my cancer in 16 days. I shall be grateful to you as long as I live.
Yours Truly, WILLIAM KIRSCHNER.

Looks Like Himself Again.

Dr. E. O. Smith, Kansas City, Mo.
Dear Doctor:—I write to tell you we are well and that the cancer you treated on my back is entirely cured, and I am back to my old weight again. When I went to you for treatment I weighed one hundred and five pounds, now I weigh one hundred and sixty-two pounds, and they all say I am looking like myself again.
Tell Mrs. Smith that we thank her for her picture. We thank you both every day of our lives. We shall never forget what you have done for us. We have been trying to get one of our neighbors to come and see you. I told him that if you said you could cure him that he would be cured.
Your grateful friends,
MR. AND MRS. CULLER.

(Mr. Culler was cured of scirrhus cancer on the small of the back, that measured six inches up and down and five inches across. He has been cured for nearly two years.)

She is Sure She is Cured.

White Hall, Illinois.
Dr. E. O. Smith Sanitarium Co., Kansas City, Mo.
Dear Doctor and Mrs. Smith:—Through the guidance of kind Providence and your skillful treatment I am completely cured of that dreadful malady, cancer. My breast is entirely healed and I consider myself cured. I would have written you sooner but wanted to be sure it was cured. I feel grateful to you both for the many acts of kindness and courtesy shown me while at your home. I felt at home there. The treatment was not nearly as severe as I supposed it would be. I will heartily recommend you when I have opportunity. My friends all think I have improved wonderfully. Please accept my heartiest thanks for all you have done for me.
Wishing you success in your noble work I remain ever your friend,
