Prof. C. Jones of the Chadron Academy was in Harrison a few hours last Saturday. Mr. Jones is looking up students for the Academy, and we know of no educational institution in the Northwest that gives better advantages than this Academy.

They have a good corps of teachers and are well equipped in every way to give the best results, and being a christian institution parents need have no fear for the welfare of their children that are placed there; we are personally acquainted with the Principal L. M. Oberkotter and know him to be a perfect gentleman which his many students can verify; if you have a boy or girl that has passed our common school, and you want to send them away we know of no better place than the Chadron Academy, and it is near home.

School begins in Harrison next Monday with E. Stransburg as principal, Miss Lizzie Parsons intermediate teacher, and Miss Amy Christian as primary teacher. What our children will get from this year work will depend largely upon the patrons. Teachers are only human beings, therefore they need the assistance and co-operation of every father and mother in the district, and if they get this we don't fear for the success of our school, if there are any grievances at any time please remember we have a school board and we are sure the teachers will be pleased at any time to talk over matters of interest to the school with the patrons; so patrons let us start in the year with the one object in view, that is to have a good school, and we will have it, what say you?

Dan Slattery was taken with cramps on last Sunday and has had several attacks during the week, but is now improving slowly. Dan has had a pretty close call and had to suffer intensely but we hope he will pull around all right.

With the issue of this week the Crawford Bulletin, after an existence of seven and one half years, will suspend publication, owing to the fact that further efforts to keep the paper running are not warranted by the meager support tendered a second paper in Crawford. His retirement from the newspaper field will make Mr. Lindeman the nineteenth man who has attempted and finally given up the task of making the second newspaper a success in a community where there is barely sufficient patronage for one to live. In this connection the Tribune desires to bear testimony to the fact that of all its many competitors in this field Lou Lindeman has been decidedly the fairest and the most honorable, and it wishes him a successful future.

Mr. J. E. Marsteller, a rancheman of Harrison Nebr. stopped off here Tuesday. He informed us that he will dispose of his interests at Harrison and will embark in the hardware business at Wayne Neb. having purchased a stock there.—Gordon Journal.

We are sorry that the above is only too true. Mr. Marsteller is one of our Pioneers and has been one of Harrison's most successful business men, and has by his honest dealings and generous hearted ways brought to him a host of friends who will hate to see him go, but we felt when he sold his business here one year ago it was his first move toward leaving the town. He has a ranch near town which he will leave in charge of Frank Wright until he disposes of it to advantage and he is now shaping his business affairs that he may get away as soon as possible which will be about the first of next week.

A BAD STORM

One of the worst storms of the year swept down on Harrison last Sunday evening at 5:30 and continued to pour down rain with small hail for about one hour. The storm was the heaviest to the north west filling up the dry draws and making young rivers out of them washing out fences and everything that came in its road. Several culverts and one bridge was washed out on the North Western track west of Harrison. Lightning struck James Bourret's house but did no great damage other than to knock four holes in the building. Luckily the family were away from home at the time or we might have a different story to write; Several families were caught out in the storm but we are glad to say no one was hurt, more than a good sound drenching. County treasurer Lux and family was coming in from his ranch on Cottonwood when the storm struck him about one mile east of town and he managed to get his team unhitched and did the best he could to protect himself and family by the side of the wagon until the storm abated when he drove over to J. W. Reids where he found ready hands to help him and family to get dry. L. Gerlach and George Gerlach and families were out in the storm, George says it beat any storm he was ever in. J. B. Burke and wife and part of the children were also numbered among the unlucky ones but being in a covered rig suffered but little inconvenience other that to sit and wait for what might come, until Rev. Daniels spied them after a time taking shelter by the side of the Church and soon conveyed the little ones to his house. Water was running in every direction and some that had taken to their storm caves had to wade out and take their chances of the storm then being drowned in a cave. About the saddest thing that happened was the poor Editor losing his porkers by being too near the flood, we had banked a great deal on these porkers and was about ready to defy the strikers and packers both, but we will have to cut pork out of our bill-of-fare unless some delinquent comes to the rescue again.
