GOOD NEWS, IF TRUE

By far the most exciting news recently was the reported discovery by Dr. J. A. Pfeiffer, of the University of Maryland Medical School, of the cause, cure and prevention of the common cold. Dr. Pfeiffer thinks he has found the cause of colds in a germ, hitherto unknown to bacterlology, which he has named micrococcus coryza, although we could think of many harsher things to call it. He has produced colds in human beings by inoculating them with this agent, and he has also manufactured a vaccine which is said not only to cure colds, but to give immunity from them for one to three years.

We trust, however, that Dr. Pfeiffer will forgive us for suggesting that general acceptance of his findings must await further study. It is too often the case that earnest investigators in medicine are honestly misled as to the value of their discoveries, and the public is learning to become skeptical of reported cures until they are subjected to multitudinous tests. We hope such tests will bear out Dr. Pfeiffer's findings, and if they do he will have to be numbered among the world's great benefactors.

It is a reasonable assumption that the cold is the most ubiquitous, persistent and annoying human ailment. Even the healtiest persons are subject to it, and among the aged and the frail it is often the precipitating cause of death. To the layman it seems strange that its nature should still be a mystery to medical men, who have made such vast strides in the understanding and conquest of disease. Nevertheless it is so, unless micrococcus coryza proves to be the culprit.

Let us not be kept too long in doubt. Let the battalions of the American Medical Association swoop down upon Dr. Pfeiffer's laboratory and tell us what their verdict is.

CHICAGO AWAKENS

With the assassination of Alfred J. Lingle, reporter of the Chicago Tribune, the press and the people of Chicago have come abruptly to realize what they should have known for a long time—that the depredations of gangsters could not remain simply a private war among the gangs of the underworld. Once the leaders of these lawless groups felt that they had by their strength found an immunity from the forces of law and order, it was inevitable that they should extend their outrages to persons who are not of their stripe.

The Tribune and other newspapers have declared open ware on the gang system—a war that is to end only with the victory of decency and respect for law. Police and state authorities promise every effort that they can possibly make. In this they are certain to have the support of all civilized men. Chicago, if it has been lax in recent years, is nevertheless waging a campaign that is serving the interests of the American people as a whole. For the conditions that have made Chicago a center of outrageous killings—eleven in ten days lately—are all too common in other cities of America.

Chicago's challenge to the gravest enemy of American life merits the support of every community in the United States. However desirable it may be that we push on with projects to improve prison conditions, however sound it may be in the long run to work out a practical application of more humanitarian and scientific principles of penology—the more immediate problem is to rid the nation of this cancerous growth of sanguine banditry and medieval private war. For this accomplishment of this end no legal measures are too severe, no human efforts too great.

—:o:—

A NATION ON WEELS

The annual American phenomenon is about to take place again. Within a short while, millions of humble citizens who have lived prosaic lives during the winter months will lock up their homes, pile into every conceivable sort of motor vehicle and succumb to the call of the open road.

They will leave behind them comfortable beds, convenient kitchens, and never-failing bathrooms. For these, they will exchange the hard bunks of tourists camps and the lumpy beds of "rooms for tourists" hostelries, cock-eyed cooking devices of metal and stone, and, when lucky, pitchers and bowls of cold, hard water.

They will drive for hours every day over paved and gravelled roads that send waves of blistering heat upward into their faces. They will sweat over punctured tires and faltering sparkplugs. Flies and mosquitoes will join forces to torment them by day and night. Grandmothers who have been placed by physicians or gluten bread and spinach diets will subsist on hotdogs and barbecued pork, washed down with pop.

But they will be an army of happy American citizens! They will be emancipated from the ordinary cares of life, even though beset by new ones just as harassing. Who cares? Whoopee! Ho for the life of a gypsy!

The American Automobile Association estimated that 11,250,000 automobiles, bearing 45,000,000 Americans, will tour this country and Canad this summer.

Despite the heat, the flies, the lumpy beds, the punctures, and the dirt—can 11,250,000 Americans be wrong? Form your own conclusion. And when are you leaving?

—:o:—

Do the folks of Chicago attend high-class concerts to enjoy the music or just because it is "the thing" to do, "to stare and be stared at, to point out famous folk and argue over the cost of gowns on display, and whisper scandal?"

A woman poring over the bargains advertised in the paper always is a sure sign there is going to be another awful dent in father's bank roll.

Another trouble with the world is that there are not enough husbands saying it with flowers, nor enough wives saying it with flour—plus the other ingredients.
