CONVENTION CLOSED.

The Nomination of the Vice President.

How the News was Received

AT THE GOVERNOR'S HOME.

Buffalo, July 11. There was the most intense excitement this morning. Immense crowds surrounded the telegraph and newspaper offices. At the announcement of Cleveland's nomination cheer after cheer were given, men waved their hats and acted like mad. The enthusiasm was unbounded. Handshaking by democrats and republicans was general. A salute of 100 guns was fired by the Cleveland gun squad, under the direction of the Cleveland central club. A meeting of the club is called for to-morrow night, when a general celebration will be held. The Cleveland managers from this city to the convention will be met on their return with a brass band and parade.

AT THE METROPOLIS.

New York, July 11.—News of the nomination of Cleveland was received at the produce exchange with long cheering. In Wall street it was received by every one in a manner indicating that it was a foregone conclusion.

There was no excitement about the city hall as no politicians were there. All the democrats are in Chicago and the republican aldermen are out of town. Mayor Edson said: "I consider the choice excellent. I have not a single doubt of the governor's election."

Republican officeholders declined to make comments for publication, but in private seemed pleased with the nomination considering him an easy man to beat.

AT THE NEW YORK CAPITOL.

Albany, N. Y, July 11—One hundred guns were fired in honor of Cleveland's nomination the minute the news was received. The governor is in the executive chamber at the capitol with Adjutant General Farnsworth and a few other friends. The booming of cannon first announced the nomination to him. Standing in his private room with Farnsworth on the right side and Colonel Lamont, his private secretary, on the left, he received the congratulations of those present in a dignified manner.

Senator Wallace, of Pennsylvania, said that he nominated as a candidate for vice president a man conversant with public affairs throughout his whole life, an honored statesman, a pure and upright citizen, a victim of the greatest fraud ever perpetrated on the American people—Thomas A. Hendricks. [Cheers.]

The presentation of Hendricks' name was greeted with enthusiastic cheering.

Menzie of Indiana, declared very emphatically that Mr. Hendricks was not and could not be a candidate for the vice presidency. He said that Mr Hendricks had authorized him to say so.

Walsh, of Georgia, asked Menzies if he was authorized to say that Hendricks would not accept the unanimous nomination of the national democratic convention, for the office of vice president.

Menzie repeated his statement.

Wallace, of Pennsylvania, said that Mr. Hendricks had been once chosen vice president and had been despoiled of the office. He moved to suspend the rules and nominate Thomas A. Hendricks as candidate for vice president by acclamation.

Harris, of Va., united the voice of Virginia with that of the Keystone state.

Hubbard of Texas, made a spirited speech in favor of giving Hendricks the office out of which he had been cheated.

Weed, of New York, suggested that the roll of states be called so as to put on record the unanimous vote for Hendricks.

Wallace accepted the suggestion, withdrew his motion and moved that the nominations close.

The motion was agreed to, and the clerk proceeded to call the roll of states. The result was the unanimous nomination of Hendricks as candidate for vice president.

Menzie, of Indiana asked that his state be excused from voting. [Load cries of "No, no"] He then asked whether there was any name but Mr. Hendricks before the convention and on receiving an answer in the negative, he said: "Then, sir, the state of Indiana casts thirty votes for Thomas A. Hendricks."

The demonstration that followed exceeded in vociferous and enthusiastic any similar scene that has taken place during this eventful day. All the flags and banners were gathered around the section occupied by the Indiana delegation, and there waved amid the audience, and the strains of patriotic music, from the band, ending with "Auld Lang Syne," the words of which were sung with feeling, the chorus being joined in by several thousand voices. The band then struck up "Old Hundred" and I joined in the solemn hymn of praise. This was followed by the music and song of "America" and that again by "Home, Sweet Home." The scene was equally grand and impressive.

Finally the chairman got a chance to make a formal announcement of the vote. He said there had been 816 votes cast—all of them for Thomas A Hendricks, and that Mr. Hendaicks was therefore the candidate of the national democratic covention for vice president of the United States.

Resolutions were passed to the temporary chairman, the permanent chairman and clerks and officers of the convention; also to the reportorial corps and press of the country for their accurate and impartial reports of the proceedings.

The chairman on his own behalf, moved a vote of thanks to the sergeant at arms, Mr. Bright, of Indiana. Motion adopted.

Votes of thanks were also passed to the mayor of the city, Carter Harrison, and the chief of police and to the citizens of Chicago, for their hospitality. The convention then adjourned sine die.
