AN AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

[The following singular poem, from Mr. Tilton, written at the time of his troubles, has a singular interest now:]

SIR MARMADUKE'S MUSINGS.

I won a noble fame,
But, with a sudden frown,
The people snatched my crown,
And in the mire trod down
My lofty name.

I bore a bounteous purse,
And beggars by the way
Then blessed me day by day.
But I, grown poor as they,
Have new their curse.

I gained what men call friends,
But now their love is hate,
And I have learned too late
How mated minds unmate,
And friendship ends,

I clasped a woman's breast,
As if her heart I knew,
Or fancied, would be true,
Who proved—alas! she, too—
False like the rest.

I now am all bereft—
As when some tower doth fall,
With battlements and wall
And gate and bridge and all—
And nothing left.

But I account it worth
All pangs of fair hopes crossed—
All loves and honor lost—
To gain the heavens at cost
Of losing earth.

So, lest I be inclined
To render ill for ill—
Henceforth in me instill
O God, a sweet good will
To all mankind.

Mossy Hollow, Nov. 1, 1871.

From the Indiana Farmer.

KEEP THE GRANGE PURE.

The grange was organized to improve the conditions of agriculture, disseminate knowledge on practical subjects, cultivate and develop the resources of our country and elevate the conditions of all laboring classes. This Order has grown with unprecedented vigor, till it is a great power in the nation, and here is the danger. It is only too true of mankind that the possession of great power generally involves a dispostion to wield it with intolerance, which often results in fanaticism and tyranny. Still more so is this true when the acquisition of power has been sudden, and fall into experienced hands not accustomed to the great responsibilities. While this organization includes men of great capabilities, yet it would indeed be strange if did not number among its vast membership men of questionable character. Such are the facts. Some of the members are now asking the grave question:

"How shall the Order be kept pure?" Reports of defalcations and scandalous stories have found lodgment in this organization. The New York World says that in almost all the States most thoroughly identified with the grange move ment, scandals have been started, and that invariably the officers and the organs of this Order, instead of laying bare, the fullest extent, the irregularities, have endeavored to cover up the circumstances with a veil of impenetrable mysgiving as as a reason why the grange is a secret organization, and that there is no necessity of giving to the public the inside workings of the Order. It has been alleged that the Iowa grange has member who have received large profits from commercial transactions in the interests of the Order, and that an investigation had revealed the most "damning discoveries" of extravagance and corrupt management of the officers in an official capacity; but it is further stated that these reports have been smothered, and the records containing them burned. And still another report comes up that the Iowa grange has an officer who is a defaulter, and that his trial was carried on with locked doors. All these rumors, which have not been disproved, are causing irremediable injury to this Order. The country has had a sufficiency of corruption, nepotism, and extravagance, and the least suspicion that the Order has any irregularities in its management is sufficient to diminish greatly its influence. The Farmers Union says, in regard to irregularities of the Iowa grange: "The rank and file of the Order are saddened and sickened with suspicions worse than the truth. The whole result is dissatisfaction and possible disaster, and the whole result is chargeable upon those who most ardently protest their devotion to the principles of the Order and their desire for its advancement."

While the honest men of the country frankly and joyfully applaud many of the works of the grange, yet they cannot endorse, or even give countenance to, unlawful management. So long as the Order endeavors to improve agricultural pursuits, disseminate knowledge, and works for the interests of the nation, it will receive the most hearty co-operation of all honest men, whether they be farmers or not. The farming classes compose the backbone and solid structure of our national prosperity, and if they keep the grange pure, it will be a great agent in the purification of our legislation.

DARIUS H. PINGREY.

Chillicothe, Ill.

The following is an instance of the "severely calm" style of Western roportorial description: "Yesterday morning a boy sauntered up to a yard on Eighth street, where a woman was scratching the bosom of the earth with a rake, and, leaning on the fence said, "Are you going round the back yard after a while?" The woman said she didn't know; maybe she would. Why? "Because" said the boy, "I just saw the cistern lid drop on the baby's head a minute ago, and thought if you went round you might lift it off." It is currently reported that the woman went."

A wag with the word "whoa" brought a horse driven by a young man to a dead stop. That's a fine beast of yours" says the wag. "Yes, a pretty good sort of an animal, but he has one fault. He was owned by a butcher, and is sure to stop whenever he hears a calf bleat." Wag doesn't say "whoa to that horse any more.

SWINDLING GRANGE AGENTS

The Farmer's Advocate, published at Idianapolis, says:

"A manufacturer made an arrangement with a State Grange purchasing agent, who ostensibly worked for a very small percentage, but it was impossible for him to devote his time for so small a compensation, a further commission was quietly allowed by the manufacturer. In a little time some of the county agents who kenw a thing or two the mselves, became suspicious and wanted to deal directly from the manufacturer. This was arranged with a great show of fairness, the quiet commission being withheld in each transaction. But it didnot rest here. The local agents in turn became suspicious, and the county agents had to be provided for. As a result, there were three separate commissions paid in each transaction, while but one of the parties ever handled the goods.

Such escape from the dishonesty of middlemen is a matter of refreshing contemplation. Were it but a single case it might be attributed to the dishonesty of a singe individual, but it seems in this instance to have extended rapidly from one agent to a large number subordinates, all of whom were as eager to obtain a taste of the polls as politicians are supposed to be to get their finger into Credit Mobilier ples. And the Advocate solemnly warns farmers to look into these agencies, and assures them that they are proving far less profitable to the consumers than it was supposed they would prove."

New apples at one dollar and ten cents a quart. Ten cents for apples and one dollar for a doctor.

In Pennsylvania, a lady was hooked by a neighbor's bull, for wearing a red dress, now bemoans that she has no redress.

A Winona paper tells us that Winona is a "bad place to get drunk." If the place persists in getting drunk, it is a good place to stay away from.
