Uncle Sam Smells Law Violations; Starts Oil Quiz

Difference in Rates Between California and Chicago Arouses Curiosity of Government.

By International News Service.

Chicago, July 29.—Why gasoline is sold at 9 cents a gallon in California and at 21 and 22 cents in Chicago, while midcontinent refiners are planning to shut their plants because of the crude oil surplus, was the subject of an investigation by the government.

Officials of the federal district attorney's office were alert in their inquiry for any sign of a violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws. The government's investigation is a focus on the action of members of the Western Petroleum Refining association, who have decided to curtail refining "to stabilize the market." This, certain government officials fear, will cause a rise in the price of gasoline, despite an over-production of crude oil.

"There is the greatest oil over-supply the world has ever known," L. V. Nicholas, president of the National Petroleum Marketers association, told International News Service. "The public should get the benefit of this situation by a cut in the gasoline price."

Twenty-five refineries in the mid-continental field will be affected by the curtailment decision. Efforts to ascertain where the Standard Oil company (Indiana) stood on this question brought no results, since employes said the board chairman was absent from Chicago and other executives were not at their offices.

It was reported that the principal advocate of the closing policy for refineries had been J. S. Cosden of Cosden & Co., Oklahoma, whose daily output of 35,000 barrels of gasoline entitles it to the distinction of being the greatest single producer in its territory. Men familiar with oil matters said the shutdown would take 113,000 barrels of oil from the market daily.

The low prices in California were attributed to the ferocity of a retailers' fight by Chicago oil dealers.

Old Settlers' Picnic Set for August 23 at Nemaha

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee.

Nemaha, Neb., July 28.—The 40th annual "Old Settlers' picnic" will be held here August 23.—This has become quite an annual event in this part of the state, and this year there will be a larger gathering from far and wide than has been seen before. One of the oldest men of the town or state will be on the job. P. Kerker, who has been conducting a meat market in Nemaha for the past 56 years, will tell all of the prodigals who return how things have been running. He has been in his present little meat market on the main street for the past 48 years and says he can make bologna the same as he did a half century ago.
