

Destroys Hair Germs

Recent discoveries have shown that falling hair is caused by germs at the roots of the hair. Therefore, to stop falling hair, you must first completely destroy these germs. Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, will certainly do this. Then leave the rest to nature.

Recent discoveries have also proved that dandruff is caused by germs on the scalp. Therefore, to cure dandruff, the first thing to do is to completely destroy these dandruff germs. Here, the same Ayer's Hair Vigor will give the same splendid results.

Neuralgia Pains

Are the result of an abnormal condition of the more prominent nerve branches, caused by congestion, irritation, or disease. If you want to relieve the pain try Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They often relieve when everything else fails. They leave no disagreeable after-effects. Just a pleasurable sense of relief. Try them.

"I have neuralgia headache right over my eyes, and I am really afraid that my eyes will burst. I also have neuralgia pain around my heart. I have been taking Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills recently and find they relieve these troubles quickly. I seldom find it necessary to take more than two tablets for complete relief."

MRS. KATHERINE BAILEY
117 Valley St., Carlisle, Mo.

"I have awful spells of neuralgia and have doctored a great deal without getting much benefit. For the last two years I have been taking Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills and they always relieve me. I have been so bad with neuralgia that I sometimes thought I would go crazy. Sometimes it is necessary to take two of them, but never more and they are sure to relieve me."

Jas Cooley, mail messenger at this place, drove over the elevated crossing near the new bank building last Saturday evening and was thrown out of his wagon, striking on his ear and right hand, both of which were slightly damaged—his ear being badly scratched and one of his fingers being dislocated. He was on deck, however, the next morning to carry the mail.

The Edwards & Bradford hardware store in this place was burglarized some time Saturday night, and about $63 worth of goods taken. Entrance was gained by taking out a glass in the rear door and reaching in and removing an iron bar that held the door shut. The rest was easy. From the tracks left in some sand near the back-door there were undoubtedly two cracksmen on the job. A list of the stuff taken, as near as George Kohlmeier, manager for the company at this place, could determine was three double-barrel shot guns, 12 gauge, one 22 Winchester repeating rifle, one 5-shot H-B revolver, and one tattoo intermittent alarm clock. No trace of the thieves has been found as yet.

Jud O'Dell has moved into his new house and is as "snug as a bug in a rug." His lots are nicely graded up and he will have as nice a little place as there is in town when he gets trees and grass.

The Herald pencil pusher in making the rounds in search for news noticed among other things a crate of the finest young turkeys said scribe ever saw on the market. They were all fat and plump; also a few crates of ducks. On making inquiry—with the hope of a donation—as to the owner, we were told they belonged to Jud O'Dell. Upon our hint as above: "Too late—news scribe," "they are for the boys. We wished we were a boy. Jud is surely putting a fine bunch "for the boys."

THE LURE OF THE MOTOR.

The most violent opponents of the automobile are probably those who have never had the experience of riding in one. This partly explains the dislike for the machines which is so manifest in some rural communities. An enthusiastic motorist recently recounted how he unintentionally conquered a tall countryman, and converted him to the "cult of the road."

One day, when I was making a long trip across the State, a tremendous shower came up. It drove into our faces so hard that it was no use to go on till it let up a little. There was a barn by the roadside, and we got the machine and ourselves inside of it as quick as we could, without taking the trouble to ask if we might. It was too wet to stand on ceremony.

We had no sooner got settled than in walked a big, husky farmer.

"This is my barn," he said.

We begged his pardon for entering without his permission, and mentioned the rain as our excuse. He didn't say a thing, but kept walking round the car and staring at it as if he had never seen one before. Then he broke out with, "I hate 'em!"

We asked him why, and found out that it was because one of his chickens had been killed by a car. Of course we sympathized, and "jollied" him a little, and finally we roused his curiosity.

"How much does she weigh?" he asked.

We told him, and that led to other talk, and in ten minutes he was feeling better. When the shower passed, we got ready to go on, but just as we were going to start, the farmer suddenly remarked, "I'm going a piece down the road."

"Get in," I said. "There's plenty of room. How far are you going?"

He named a place a couple of miles away. During the ride he held himself stiff as a post, braced against all possible jolts and lurches. When we reached the place he had named, we asked him where he wanted to be put down.

"The place is about a mile farther on," he said.

We went on along for a mile or so, but there was no signal from the farmer except an occasional question as to how fast "she" was traveling.

Finally I asked him again where he wanted to get out. This time he thought he would go to Redfield, a village five miles off.

It was nearly sundown when we got into Redfield, and still the farmer made no motion to leave us stop. I leaned back and asked him a third time where he wanted to go. He seemed to be fascinated with the motion, and replied that if we were going toward Hatten he "kind of guessed he'd go along, too."

Well, he rode thirty miles, and ended by getting down finally at Milford, where there was a railroad station. Then he began to repent. He was a long way from home, without a cent in his pockets. He hated to let us know, but he had to. We just laughed at him, and clipped in enough to pay his fare home. Billy couldn't help saying, "Well, what do you think of the game now?" The old fellow grinned in a sheepish sort of way, and said, "Boys, it's all right! What does a car like this cost?"

The Final Touch.

It was known that Anabelle Hobbs had made a good match, from a worldly point of view; just how good, however, nobody in Hillville fully realized until the return of Anabelle's mother from a visit to the new home.

"I guess there's nothing Anabelle can't have if she takes the notion," said Mrs. Hobbs, with a sigh of satisfaction. "I tell her she'd ought to show reason, for of course Henry will get kind of wanted to her after a while, and not be quite so ready; but now he takes up with all her whims. What do you suppose his last gift was?"

The listener dared not venture a supposition.

"I didn't imagine you would," said Mrs. Hobbs, with satisfaction. "Anabelle's always been set on onions ever since she was a child, but her pa and I never encouraged her in it, first because they smell so, and then, too, they cost considerable unless you raise them yourself."

"Well, Henry found out how fond she is of 'em, and he ordered a half-bushel to be there when they got back from the trip; and then when she told him my objections, and he knew I was coming, he bought a pint bottle of that new hyacinth perfume and put it in the guest room for me."

"When I got it on, why, Anabelle might have eaten the whole of that half bushel of onions and I should never have known it. Here, you smell of that handkerchief and you'll see I'm not speaking a word beyond the truth."

Force of Habit.

There is a certain Western Congressman whose boundless affability and habitual absent-mindedness have occasionally led him into absurd mistakes. One day, during his last campaign, as he stepped from the train at the station of his home town, after an arduous two weeks of stumping and "gild-handling," his little daughter rushed up to him and kissed him. The Congressman beamed upon her with a proud and tender parental eye.

"Well, well!" he exclaimed. "If it isn't my little Alberta!" Then he added, mechanically: "And how is your dear old father?"—Success Magazine.

Broilers.

The little child of the stuns was enjoying her first visit to the country and enthusiastic in her admiration of the farmyard.

"Just look at the chickens!" she exclaimed in ecstasy. "They're all running about raw!"—London Opinion.

Different Conditions.

"Shakespeare was a great producer as well as a playwright."

"Yes," answered the New York manager, "but conditions were different then. He wasn't troubled by any shortage of chorus girls."—Washington Star.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

Much to give thanks for in good old Dakota county this year. The best of crops and prices—health—wealth and prosperity.

"The Bank that ALWAYS treats you RIGHT," at Jackson, has a few thousand dollars it wishes to loan on farms, chattels or good secured notes. Tell your neighbor and come yourself, when we can do ANYTHING, in banking, for you. We'll do it RIGHT and at lowest cost, and YOU must be suited.

We pay four per cent interest on time deposits and keep them absolutely safe for you.
