Antelope Permits Dwindling

LINCOLN—About 250 antelope permits for this fall's hunting season remain to be taken, announced the Nebraska Game Commission today.

The North Sioux Unit is closed, the Box Butte Unit is over half filled, and the Banner unit has about one-third of its permits taken. Some 800 pronghorn permits were authorized in all for the three-day season, September 16 through 18.

Deer hunters are slow to select their units, with applications behind last year's pace. The Blue Unit in southeastern Nebraska, closed to firearm hunting until this year, is about 78 per cent filled. The Wahoo Unit, between the Blue and the Platte River, is also 78 per cent taken.

Deer firearm hunting starts in late October this year, running from the 28th through November 1. The entire state is open, but divided into 17 management units. A hunter cannot cross unit lines.

Applications for the 14,000 deer firearm and remaining antelope permits can be obtained from conservation officers, county clerks, Game Commission district offices in North Platte, Alliance, Norfolk, Bassett, and Lincoln, and some permit vendors.

Bow hunting, one of the most generous seasons in the nation, runs from September 16 through December 31, exclusive of firearm season. The entire state is open. Archers may hunt and travel anywhere to get any species, any sex.
