Tecumseh must be a hard town. Grandmother Tipton propose to take the town across her knee and metaphorically apply the maternal shingle, while Bob Norvill, the "Boy Preacher," has turned a whole battery of biblical grape on the ungodly horde without material injury. It remains for the woman suffragists to complete the reformation by holding a county convention on the 6th and 7th. Verily, the way of the transgressor is hard.

'Twas night in Pawnee county, and elsewhere. The husband returned home unexpectedly. A suspicious pair of boots cast their shadows across the chamber door of his better half. The atmosphere was instantly charged with profane exclamation points, while the figure of a man, clothed in a sleeping duster formed a pretty picture on a back ground of Senegambian tints. The man gasped for air—the outer air—but before he reached it a pistol ball relieved the vacuum of his lungs and he laid down on the parlor carpet to rett. The husband put up his little gun and departed, while the "innocent cause" bathed her lovely "Don" in tears and porous plasters, and he died soon after. His name is Henry M. Myers, the father of six boys and four girls. His victim is the mother of three children and wife of Oscar Stanton.

The Jury System.

Laramie Boomerang.

There seems to be a kind of one-horse effort now being made by the enemies of the jury system, to do away with it and thus leave us with the national fabric tottering to its very foundation. There can be nothing in the whole mechanism of a free republic more important and necessary to the success of national security than the jury system, a system which not only gives every American citizen the right to submit his grievances to a panel of twelve enlightened peer, but which insures to each juror $2 a day and board, with a period of mental calm and intellectual rest which is priceless as a soother and tranquilizer to the invalid who generally sits on a jury by advice of his physician instead of filling his system full of opiates. Sea air and a change of scene of course are good, but give us the sweet, unruffled sleep of the juryman as a health-promoter by all means in place of the expensive sea voyage and the high-priced foreign hotel.

William H. Root was giving us his experience this morning on a Chicago jury, showing how the free, unfettered burning in the breast of the true American juror, even in Chicago.

"I was empaneled," said William, sadly, "in a damage case there one time. I most always fixed it so as to be drawn on jury when other avenues to employment seemed closed, and sometimes I would make $35 or $40 a day, according to the nature of the case. People have widely different notions about the market value of substantial justice. Some are willing to pay a fair commission to the poor juror, and others are timid and reserved about putting up.

"This was a case where a little kid has stuck his foot through a defective sidewalk and injured the sciatic nerve so that the leg was paralyzed and the boy a sure enough cripple for life.

"Suit was brought for $10,000 and it was proved up all right and a good case, but we had the blankety blankedest cosmopolitan jury you ever saw.

"We had a Polander that couldn't speak a work of English, a deaf man from Oskosh, and a half-witted cuss from Blue Island. Then there was a one-eyed man from the rhubarbs, who had to be waked up with a chair for meals. There was also a Norwegian on the jury who hadn't been in this country very long, and didn't know a verdict from a porous plaster.

"The whole mob was about the most ornery and trifling aggregation of unprejudiced intellect you ever saw. The first thing we did was to disagree.

"It was the afternoon before Christmas that they locked us in with two overworked spittoons, a volume of Greenleaf on evidence, and a work on medical jurisprudence. We looked at the pictures in the medical work, read aloud a few pages on the rule regulating the verdict in cases of manslaughter and malicious tape-worm, and then took a ballot.

"It stood all the way from $50 up to $10,000. We voted till about 3 o'clock Christmas morning, and then I got mad. We had exhausted all the stories we knew, and argued and cussed and swore, but the vote stood just the same every pop. Finally I took the 'colonel' to one side and made a proposition to him. The colonel was the only man on the jury (except me) that seemed to know what the jury was for. Most of the outfit seemed to think a jury was empaneled mostly to disagree and draw their per diem.

"The colonel nodded and said that was all right when I conferred with him, and I arose to address the free, enlightened, unprejudiced and illiterate jury of my countrymen.

"I said, 'Now, gentlemen, you are aware that we seem to be divided considerably on this question. We are now beginning on the Christmas holidays with about $9,000 between the two extremities of this jury. I see no arriving at a conclusion until after the usual Christmas festivities are over. In a few hours the court will be raking hot stuffing out of the open countenance of a baked turkey, and asking the various guests whether they will take some of the light or some of the dark meat, while we are here eating bologna sausage and Rip Van Winkle cheese. Before night the counsel on both sides will be so drunk that they can't get home without a directors and a posse comitatus while we are drinking cistern water and ruining our health. I propose that we put on our ballots the amount of damage we are individually in favor of, and then we will add the whole gosh blasted thing up and divide it by twelve. That will be the measure of damages and the verdict.'

"They greeted my proposition with applause.

"When the votes were examined, they found that the Polander had voted as usual, and so had everybody but the colonel and me. We voted $40,000 apiece. That brought the average up to $6,000 for the cripple.

"We made out a verdict, signed her, called in the bailiff, submitted our decision, wished each other a merry Christmas and went home.

"O, I tell you, you can't abolish the jury system. It's one of the abutments upon which rests the structure of freedom and equity, and all those things. If you bust the jury system you'll have to abolish also three-card monte and other games of chance. I tell you Americans will not be denied this kind of mental relaxation. It's about all the fun we have."

A Married Lady

Arkansas Gazette

The other day a Colonel Bascup was arrested and arranged before a justice court on a charge of abusing a colored woman.

"What did this man do?" asked the judge of the woman.

"He used sultin' language, sah."

"What did he say?"

"I was workin' at his house, an' while he was on de front poarch a colered gen'leman come up an' axed, 'Is dar a colored lady heah named Jane?' 'Dar's a colored 'oman heah by that name,' said the white man. Dat's what he said."

"Is that all?"

"All! Ain't dat a nuff. Callin' me a 'oman. I'll hab him ter know dat I'se a lady."

"Look here, Jane," said the judge, "were you not convicted in this court, some time ago, of stealing a feather bed?"

"Certainly, I was 'victed when I 'knowledged de fack."

"Then why do you come around here calling yourself a lady?"

"Well, yer see, when I stole de bed I was a single 'oman."

"Yes."

"But now, sah, I'se a married lady."

An appeal to the Supreme Court will no doubt be taken.

A World of Good.

One of the most popular medicines now before the American public, is Hop Bitters. You see it everywhere. People take it with good effect. It builds them up. It is not as pleasant to the taste as some other Bitters as it is not a whisky drink. It is more like the old fashioned bone-set tea that has done a world of good. If you don't feel just right try Hop Bitters.—Nunda News.

Good For Nebraska

Provo City (Utah) Enquirer.

On Monday last a man named Richard J. Smith who has relatives in this city with whom he has been staying for some time past, was taken in charge of Sheriff Johnson, of Saunders county, Nebraska, back to Wahoo, where he Smith had formerly resided, on a charge of seduction. The above named Sheriff came here on Saturday last and after communicating the nature of his business to Sheriff Turner, the latter took steps for the arrest of Smith, which was accomplished on Saturday night. This proceeding on the part of the officers of the State of Nebraska, in sending their sheriff a distance of eleven hundred miles to arrest a man on the charge named appears a most singular one, it being a rare case indeed where in any state or territory in America, the destroyer of female virtue is by statute made to pay the penalty of his crime. We frequently hear of instances where the seducer has met just punishment at the hands of an avenging father, brother or other relative, but it is certainly an uncommon thing to hear of a law, such as is said to exist on the statute books of the State of Nebraska, wherein the Act of Seduction under a promise of marriage is defined as a felony, or of an officer of the law traveling a distance of eleven hundred miles to arrest an offender on such a charge. The existance of a law of this kind on the statute books of Nebraska, and the remarkably diligence of the people of that state particularly in executing the law against offenders, even to tracking them up a distance of eleven hundred miles, are circumstances highly creditable to the character of the people of Nebraska, and afford an example worthy of imitation in every other state and territory in the union.

A Mountain of Iron

About a mile north of Durango, Colorado, is a wonderful mountain of solid iron ore, called the Cerro del Mercado. The ore is said to be entirely free from phosphor and sulphur, and to assay from 50 to 75 per cent. pure iron. That part of the mountain above the ground measures 5,250 feet long, 1,200 feet broad, and 702 feet high. The iron produced is so soft that it bends and twists like wax, and will bear comparison with the best Norway. An English engineer has estimated its value at $10,000,000,000 and make the somewhat astonishing calculation that, at the rate of $1,000,000 a year, it would take over 800 years to level the hill to the ground. The great Humboldt, who, by the way, never came as far as Durango, was induced to believe the deposit was an aerolite, similar to that of Zacatecas, and reported it so, but was very much mistaken, as further investigation proved. Frederick Weidner, an eminent German scientist, who carefully examined the mountain during six months in 1851, attributes, with right, its apparition to a tremendous volcanic eruption. It has been ascertained that the same ore extends under the plain of Durango, where it interrupted the completion of an artesian well at a depth of 300 feet, a mile and a half from the foot of the Cerro. This is without doubt the most marvelous iron deposit in the world.

Pour on Oil."

L. P. Follett, Marion, O., states that he has used THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL for burns and has found nothing to equal it in soothing the pain and giving relief. eod-1w

Butted His Way to Safety.

Salt Lake Tribune.

They had a little game of draw at the surveyor's camp near Cherry creek the other day, and the negro cook took a hand. He also took the disputed "pot," and then the row began. The negro butted one man in the stomach, and then hid in a tent. They haunted him out of that, but are no doubt sorry they found him, as he ran the blockade by doing some scientific butting, seeing that one of his opponents was armed with a knife and one with an axe. One man got it in the mouth and the other in the stomach, and the negro made for the woods. His mode of fighting was a revelation for the boys. After getting so hungry next morning that they would rather eat than fight, the cook was permitted to return to camp.
