SPRING FEVER

At this season nearly every one needs a tonic to stir up the vital forces, and we know of no tonic so good as Brown's Iron Bitters. IRON enters into almost every physician's prescription for those who need building up.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS

Trade Mark. QUALITY PURITY NOT QUANTITY. On Every Bottle.

For Weakness, Lassitude, Lack of Energy, &c., it HAS NO EQUAL, and is the only iron medicine that is not injurious. It Enriches the Blood, Invigorates the System, Restores Appetite, Aids Digestion. It does not blacken or injure the teeth, cause headache or produce constipation—like other iron medicines. Dr. G. H. Bigelow, a leading physician of Springfield, O., says:

"Brown's Iron Bitters is a thoroughly good medicine. I use it in my practice, and find its action unrivalled by all other forms of iron. In weakness and a low condition of the system, Brown's Iron Bitters is usually a positive necessity. It is all that is claimed for it."

Genuine has trade mark and crossed red lines on wrapper. Take no other. Made only by BROWN CHEMICAL CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

PRIVATE COUNSELOR

CANCER OF THE TONGUE.

A Case Resembling That of Gen. Grant.

Some ten years ago I had a scrofulous sore on my right hand which gave me great trouble, and under the old time treatment healed up, but it had only been driven into the system by the use of potash and mercury, and in March, 1882, it broke out it broke out in my throat, and concentrated in what some of the doctors called cancer, eating through my cheek, destroying roof of my mouth and upper lip, then attacking my tongue, palate and lower lip, destroying the palate and under lip entirely and half my tongue, eating out to the top of my left cheek bone and up to the left eye. I could not eat any solid food, but subsisted on liquids, and my tongue was so far gone I could not talk. Such was my wretched, helpless condition the first of last October, 1884, when my friends commenced giving me Swift's Specific. In less than a month the eating places stopped and healing commenced, and the fearful aperture in my cheek has been closed and firmly knitted together. A process of a new under lip is progressing finely, and the tongue which was almost destroyed is being recovered, and it seems that nature is supplying a new tongue. I can talk so that my friends can readily understand me, and can also eat solid food again. If any one doubt the facts, I would refer them to Hon. John H. Traylor, state senator of this district, and to Dr. T. S. Bradfield, of LaGrange, Ga.

THE BURR-HAMILTON DUEL.

A Bloody Page in the Early History of the Republic.

The Circumstances Leading to the Fight, Its Fatal Ending, and the Consequences—An Interesting Chapter.

[WRITTEN FOR THE BEE.]

NO. I.

The duel between Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton was undoubtedly the most memorable of any of the combats that have taken place on the so-called field of honor in our history. The well known public character of the two principals, the conspicuous positions they occupied before the American public, and the tragic fate of Hamilton, united to make it an event long to be remembered, probably never to be forgotton in this country. Both had fought gallantly for independence in the revolutionary war; Burr was vice president of the United States; Hamilton was one of the framers of the constitution, and as secretary of the treasury under Washington, had originated and established our financial system. They were bitter political rivals. The poignancy of Burr's defeat for the presidency by Jefferson in 1801, to which Hamilton largely contributed by his uncompromising hostility to him, was greatly intensified by that fact. Burr was supported by the federalists. Hamilton was a federalist, and supported Jefferson, who was the candidate of the republicans, and his hostility went so far as to assume the nature of personal assaults upon Burr's character. Thus the warfare between the two became irremovable and irreconcilable. There never was any justification for the duel between them, as there never can be any justification for such combats, but it must be admitted that Hamilton gave a great deal of provocation for the challenge. Down to the time of the combat, he continued to be unsparing in his denunciation of the former, and, as might be expected, much of his offensive language reached his ears. Candid judgment must admit that Burr was more circumspect in his treatment of, and language towards, his antagonist, than was the latter towards him. Such were the feelings existing between these men when the exciting election campaign for governor of New York came on in the summer of 1804, between Aaron Burr and Gen. Morgan Lewis. The particular cause of the challange from Burr was a communication which appeared in a paper published in New York city, the New York Mirror, and signed Dr. Charles D. Cooper, in which was used the following language: "I could detail to you a still more despicable opinion which Gen. Hamilton has expressed of Mr. Burr;" which was, that "Hamilton and Judge Kent had declared Burr a dangerous man, not fit to be trusted with the reins of power." It will be observed that the offensive language did not appear in any publication or speech made by Hamilton, or in any manner authorized or sanctioned him. He could very properly have answered Col. Burr's demand for satisfaction by saying he was not responsible for the publication made by Dr. Cooper; that the latter had no right to impute such sentiments to him (Hamilton), and had no right to publish such sentiments as coming from him, and that he utterly disavowed any connection with, or responsibility for the publication in question. Beyond that he could not recognize the right of anyone to question him. Such an answer would have relieved him of all responsibility, even according to the code of the duello, and would probably have removed the difficulty.

If Burr called anyone to an account in connection with the matter, it should have been Dr. Cooper, the man who published the obnoxious communication over his own signature. The use of Gen. Hamilton's name in that connection, and using it as a means of attack upon Burr, really shielding himself behind it, was a cowardly act, utterly unwarrantable and indefensible, it was a moral crime. If conscience did its perfect work, he must have felt in after years that he was as much the murderer of Alex Hamilton as was Burr. A little concession on both sides might have prevented the combat, with its fatal termination for one of the participants, and the political and moral ruin of the other. But Hamilton was unyielding and Burr was persistent. A long correspondence was carried on between them, but it accomplished nothing in the way of averting the hostile meeting. In the early morning of the 11th of July, 1804, a small boat with four occupants left the Manhattan side of the Hudson and crossed over to the Jersey shore. They were Burr, his second, Wm P. Van Ness, surgeon and a friend. Another boat followed soon after containing Hamilton, his second, Nathaniel Pendleton grandfather, ex-senator Pendleton of Ohio, surgeon and friend. The distance, ten paces, was marked off. Hamilton won the choice of position, and for his second to give the word of command. They were in position. There stood the vice president of the United States on one side and the foremost statesman of this land on the other, each a mark for the other's bullet, to vindicate honor. At the command the report of a pistol instantly followed by another, suddenly broke the stillness of that July morning echoing along the quiet shades of Weehawken and echoed across the waters of the Hudson, flashing in the beautiful sunlight. The bullet from Burr's pistol had planted its fatal wound and the illustrious statesman and soldier Hamilton, soon passed to his reward. And from that hour it were better for Burr that he never had been born. Hamilton evidently discharged his weapon at random, for the ball struck a sapling some four feet above the range of Burr's head. He declared he did not intend to hit his antagonist. He fell prostrate upon his face. Burr was immediately hurried from the field by his friends, while Hamilton was carefully placed in the boat and taken to his home in New York where he died the next day. His being borne back to his house with the impress of death already upon him was the first intimation his wife and children received of the awful tragedy that had been taking place. The wife was utterly paralized, for the time, by the terrible shock; but she lived for fifty years in the shadow of that tragedy, and bore the weight of its agony. Forty-four years afterwards, the winter saw her at the laying of the corner stone of the Washington monument, still wearing the weeds of mourning for her adored husband, so ruthlessly torn from her nearly half a century before. The duel with its fatal consequences created the most intense excitement throughout the country, and awoke a feeling of profound sorrow at the fate of Hamilton, and of almost execration toward his slayer. Hamilton abhorred duelling, and here was his greatest mistake. He should have aroused the moral courage within him sufficiently to have enabled him to refuse to violate the laws of God and his country. He was one of the greatest statesmen envolved by the revolution, and to-day his place is among those who rank highest on the roll of civil renown. The night before the meeting he wrote: "I was desirous of avoiding the interview, (the duel) for the most cogent of reasons:"

1. My religious and moral principles are strongly opposed to the practice of duelling, and it would give me pain to shed the blood of a fellow creature in a private combat, forbidden by the laws.

2. My wife and children are extremely dear to me, and my life is of utmost importance to them in various views. Furthermore he did not want to harm his creditors, which might be the case, if his property should be sold at a sacrifice, as a result of his death.

He entertained these convictions, and yet lacked the moral courage to sustain them.

Senator Clemns, of Alabama, a few years before the war, fiercely assailed, in a speech in the senate, R. Barnwell Rhett, of South Carolina, and expected a challenge; but not receiving any taunted the latter with having failed to vindicate himself by the code. Senator Rhett, southern fire-eating statesman as he was, replied, to his honor be it said, "For twenty years I have been a member of the Church of Christ. I cannot, and will not, dishonor my religious profession. I frankly confess that I fear God, and that I fear him more than man." That was the answer of a man of brave convictions, who would not cower before a false public sentiment, but boldly dared to hurl his defiance against it. Had Hamilton taken a similar position, he would have saved a noble life to the republic, and would have given to the world an act of moral heroism and grandeur that would have added new lustre to his increasing and enduring fame.

The public feeling in New York and New Jersey towards Burr was such that he deemed it prudent to put himself beyond the bounderies of those states, and he retired to Philadelphia, at first, and then proceeded to Florida, and remained there, only returning in time to preside over the senate at their convening in December. It was a lamentable spectacle, that of the vice-president of the United States fleeing before the public wrath evoked by the crime he had committed. He was indicted for murder in New York, and also in New Jersey. There was much controversy at the time as to whether he should be brought to trial in the latter or former state; though it is not clear to the writer how he could be tried for murder in New York, when the crime was committed in New Jersey.

The letters written by Burr during this period to his daughter Theodosia, in regard to the controversy, and the indictment, furnish a pretty clear insight into his character. In one letter he wrote thus: "The subject of dispute is, which state, New Jersey or New York, shall have the honor of hanging the vice president. * * * * You shall have due notice of the time and place. Wherever it may be you may rely on a great concourse of company, much gayety, and many rare sights, such as the lion, elephant, etc." In another letter he wrote to Theodosia, who naturally had the anxiety that a daughter would feel for her father over whose head an indictment for murder was impending, and for whom, perhaps, the gallows was waiting: "You treat with too much gravity the New Jersey affair. It should be considered a farce, and you will yet see it terminate so as to leave only ridicule and contempt for its abettors," (those who had procured his indictment for the murder of Hamilton, and were trying to bring him to trial). The trial, however, never took place.

J. J. Anderson, of Atlantic, was at the Ogden yesterday.

Mr. Holbrook, of Missouri Valley, was in the city yesterday.

Oscar Keeline has gone west to look after his cattle interests.

William Maas leaves to-morrow for a two weeks' visit east.

James Walker, of Onawa, is in the city and at the Pacific house.

George C. Kettring came up from Pacific Junction and spent Sunday in the city.

H. B. Watson goes out this morning to work the cigar trade on the "R. I." for Peregoy & Moore.

Mrs. J. P. Beach and little daughter, of Hamburg, are visiting her sister, Mrs A. W. Cowles.

B. Silloway, of Cedar Rapids, and proprietor of the Ogden house here, spent Sunday at the Ogden.

A telegram from New York Saturday states that Mrs. F. S. Pusey is rapidly recovering from her illness.

J. H. Hake, of Avoca, one of the republican candidates for representative, spent Sunday at the Pacific.

Mrs. N. P. Dodge leaves to-day for St. Louis to there meet her daughter, Carrie, who has been visiting there for the past month.

Mrs. O. A. Rogers, the milliner, left last evening for St. Louis and Chicago on a purchasing trip, to be gone about ten days.

S. T. Smith, of the celebrated belt firm of Judd & Smith, is the happy father of a little maiden, who arrived at his home Saturday morning.

Leonard Everett and his mother left Saturday for the east, where they will meet Mr. Horace Everett, who is visiting his old home in Vermont.

ADDITIONAL CITY NEWS.

The Exposition.

The long talked of exposition, to be held in the skating rink under the auspices of the Woman's Exchange of the Presbyterian church, will be opened today at 6 o'clock p. m., supper being served at that hour in the dining room and at all hours during the evening. The Bavarian band will open the entertainment with some choice selections. Sixteen of the leading merchants of the city will take this excellent opportunity of showing their patrons and the public generally their appreciation of this worthy enterprise. A lack of space prevents others equally interested from taking part in this mercantile display, which all hope will equal if not surpass the beautiful exhibition of one year ago. The ladies having this exhibition in charge have been working zealously for weeks to make it a success worthy our city and worthy of themselves, and will in return ask only that you come with your families and your friends. A new and varied programme for each evening after Monday will add new interest for every evening. The ladies' bazaar, the candy, fruit and floral displays are each under competent management. The dining room is completeness itself, and all we ask is patronage.

Slugged and Robbed.

Godfrey Smith, a farmer who has lived for some years about ten miles east of this city, recently sold out with the intention of going back to the old country. After stopping several weeks at the Creston house here, he started eastward, having when he left this city about $1,100 in certificates, or letters of credit, and $50 or so in money. On Saturday Max Mohn, proprietor of the Creston house, received a letter from John F. Barrett, of Wooster, Ohio, stating that Godfrey Smith had been found on the railway track near there, having been slugged and robbed of his money, the certificates not being taken. The letter states that the unfortunate man lies in a critical condition on account of the injuries received.

The Only Reliable Medical Institute making a specialty of caused by OVERWORK, or WORRY, the INDISCRETIONS OF YOUTH, or EXCESSES of riper years, or whatever may lead to lower the tone of life's vital forces, causing nervous and physical debility or exhaustion, seminal weakness or incontinence, impotency, premature decay, followed by the long train of symptoms which the sufferer knows but too well, are cured by our new restorative treatment, renewing vitality and vigor, and restoring vital physical and mental power.

The treatment of this class of diseases has until very recently been neglected by scientific, educated physicians, and has been in the hands of Patent Medicine vendors and ignorant men claiming to have one medicine that was a specific for all and would cure every case.

We know that thousands suffering the effects of these vices have been disappointed so often that they are discouraged and have almost given up hope of ever being cured. To all such we desire to say that as long as they continue to experiment with specific remedies or appliances represented to cure each disease, they are likely to meet with nothing but disappointment. No two cases are exactly alike and no one remedy ever has been or ever can be prepared to meet the requirements of all. We have made a careful study of these diseases in all their various forms and complications, and with the aid of an almost unlimited experience in a spring treatment to individual cases, we are enabled to cure after others have utterly failed.

We were among the first to make a specialty and study of this class of diseases, and to treat them upon scientific principles. We also treat Stricture, Gleet and Varicocele. ALL CONTAGIOUS AND BLOOD DISEASES, from whatever cause produced, successfully treated. We can remove Syphilitic poison from the system without mercury or injury to the system.

ALL COMMUNICATIONS CONFIDENTIAL. Call and consult us or send name and post-office address, plainly written, and inclose stamp, and we will send you, in plain wrapper, our PRIVATE CIRCULAR ON MEN, UPON PRIVATE, SPECIAL AND NERVOUS DISEASES, SEMINAL WEAKNESS, SPERMATORRHŒA, IMPOTENCY, SYPHILIS, GONORRHŒA, GLEET, and ALL DISEASES OF THE GENITO URINARY ORGANS (send history if your case for an opinion).

Persons unable to visit us may be treated at their homes by correspondence. Medicines and instruments sent by mail or express SECURELY PACKED FROM OBSERVATION, no marks to indicate contents or sender. One personal interview preferred if convenient. Fifty rooms for the accommodation of patients. Board and attendance at reasonable rates.
