Scrofula of Lungs.

I am now 49 years old, and have suffered for the last fifteen years with a lung trouble. I have spent thousands of dollars to arrest the march of this disease, but temporary relief was all that I obtained. I was unfit for any manual labor for several years. A friend strongly recommended the use of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), claiming that he himself had been greatly benefited in some lung troubles. I resolved to try it. The results are remarkable. My cough has left me, my strength has returned, and I weigh sixty pounds more than I ever did in my life. It has been three years since I stopped the use of the medicine, but I have no return of the disease, and there are no pains or weakness felt in my frame. I do the hardest kind of mechanical work, am free as well as I ever felt since I was a boy. The above I know are wonderful statements to make, but I am honest when I say that I owe my existence and health to day to S. S. S. I would be recreant to my duty I owe to humanity if I failed to bear this cheerful testimony to the merits of this wonderful medicine.

COUNCIL BLUFFS

ADDITIONAL CITY NEWS.

Neola's New Mayor.

NEOLA, Nov. 20.—There was an election held here yesterday for the purpose of electing a mayor to fill the vacancy. All passed off quietly. The only excitement was the arrest of a boy 18 years of age, whose residence is in an adjoining township. His vote was not challenged, but he was asked if he was a voter and replied that he was. On his retiring from the room the judges of election began to converse upon the subject of his right to vote, and one of them remarked that he would inquire into it. He left the room to make inquiries and found that the boy was under the required age and not a resident of the corporation. He proposed that the judges file information against the fellow, and they concluded to do so. The boy was put under $,00 bonds to appear this morning, when they proceeded to trial with John P. Organ for the prosecution, and J. G. Tipton for the defense. The trial consumed the greater portion of the day. The boy was bound over to await the action of the grand jury.

In the election for mayor Riley Clark, Esq., received a majority of forty-eight votes in a total vote of 112, which gave him the election by a handsome majority. He worked hard during the day, and was very liberally compensated for it.

Corn is still booming at twenty-five cents. Neola is the place to sell it.

Our neighboring town of Goodshire on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad has been creating considerable excitement in the way of horse races. They had two races there for $100 a side, and a number of smaller ones.

The cholera is taking off the greater number of hogs in the vicinity of Eight Mile Grove. Farmers there complain of having lost from ten to fifteen per day.

Bring It to an End.

At the council meeting Saturday the matter of J. M. Phillips, in regard to the change of grade by his residence, was brought up, but again deferred. It seems that this matter might be brought to some definite conclusion. It has been hanging for several years, and is apparently no nearer an amicable settlement. The present council, like its predecessor, does not seem willing to decide frankly and squarely what the city should do. Mr. Phillips naturally feels that he is not being used fairly. He says he does not want to be forced into a suit against the city, but would prefer to compromise his claims for damages, even at a sacrifice. The difficulty seems to be to get the council to say what it will do, or what it will not do. The matter is referred backwards and forwards, with no definite action. Mr. Phillips is one of the oldest residents here, has large property interests, is one of the most respected and valuable citizens, and is certainly entitled to some consideration. His request is simply that the council reach some definite conclusion, a request that is certainly reasonable. The continual dragging along of the matter, therefore, looks as if the council is not anxious to do the square thing by him.

"That tired feeling" from which you suffer so much, particularly in the morning is entirely thrown off by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Encouraging Manufacturing.

Council Bluffs is waking up to the idea that it must encourage more manufacturing here. One of the expressions of this feeling has been given by the city council, which has adopted the following resolutions offered by Alderman Shugart:

Whereas, It is desired by our city to induce manufactures to locate with us, and,

Whereas, In the opinion of this council it is to the city's great advantage to have manufacturing establishments of a solid and legitimate character locate with us, and believing that substantial aid by the city to such establishments might induce such enterprises to locate with us, and thereby help build up our city; therefore be it

Resolved, That the city solicitor is hereby instructed to draw an ordinance exempting from city taxation for the term of five years any legitimate manufacturing enterprise which will locate within the city limits hereafter, and employ of its own capital to the amount of $15,000.

Be pleasant and kind to those around you. A man who stirs his tea with an icicle spoils the tea and chills his fingers. St. Jacbbs Oil will, however, restore the circulation.

How News Travels.

A short time ago Ed Wright, the well known stenographer of Council Bluffs prepared for the BEE a very interesting account of his recent visit to the old Bender homestead in Kansas. The article attracted much attention, and other newspapers began clipping it from the BEE. It found its way into the columns of a Cincinnati paper, which failed to credit to the BEE. No change was made in the wording, and "Ed Wright of this city" appeared as in these columns. Other papers clipping it from the Cincinnati paper, changed it to "Ed Wright the Cincinnati stenographer," and in that form it is still going the rounds. The Police Gazette now produces it, and like others, who have partaken of the stolen fruit, Ed Wright is made a resident of Cincinnati.

King Thebaw's Country.

Burmah, or the Kingdom of Ava, is situated in the southeastern part of Asia beyond the river Ganges—has an area of about 200,000 square miles and a population estimated at 4,000,000. The country is bounded by China, Thibet, India, British Burmah and Siam, and is a rich and fertile region. This new annexation scheme is liable to add considerably in time to the revenues of the British Indian empire. In addition to fertile plains, Burmah is rich is ruby mines, with sapphires, the topaz, amethyst and many other precious stones are found in the beds of rivulets. Silver and iron mines also exist, as well as some famous petroleum wells. The climate is generally healthful, especially in the hilly districts, and the country possesses all the elements of prosperity. The religion of the country is Buddhism, said to have been handed down to the people by the Cinghalese. The troops are raw levies, but of late years have been drilled and partly dressed in imitation of the British soldiers, the infantry wearing red spiked helmets. The cavalry are mounted on small, thin ponies, the saddle being flat with a hump in front covered with red cloth. It is not probable that the Burmese army will be able to make any prolonged stand against the British troopers and sailors, though they have twice already fought desperately and bravely against the latter, showing determined courage, especially when behind their bamboo stockades.

In 1824 Lord Amherst, governor of India, declared war against Burmah and sent General Campbell to Cachar, which had expelled its rajan, who was tributary to the king of Burmah. Campbell gained a victory at Prome, December 3, 1825, and shortly afterwards concluded a treaty of peace with the Burmese. But, as the treaty was not ratified, Campbell renewed the war in the following year and the treaty was ratified a few days later.

The imprisonment of the captain of a ship and some other British subjects by the governor of Rangoon led to a second war in 1852, which resulted in the province of Pegu being annexed to the British Indian possessions, and, with Aracan and Tenasserim, was eventually constituted the province of British Burmah in 1862, the capital being Rangoon. The states of Araean, Merqui, Tavoy and Ye fell into British possession at the close of the war of 1824.

King Thebaw, the present ruler of Burmah, was born in 1858, and succeed to the throne in 1878. He was a distinguished student, carrying off high honors and owing much of his early training to an English missionary. He inaugurated his reign by abolishing all the monopolies which his father had granted to his favorites, and proclaimed freedom of trade. But this commencement was soon followed by an evil reaction, and he caused the arrest of his numerous brothers, numbering about fifty, lest they should conspire against him, and is said to have treated them with great cruelty. In March, 1879, the young king suddenly ordered some forty of his relatives to be massacred, and his mandate was promptly obeyed—men, women and children being butchered and thrown dead or half dead, into pits in the palace gardens. Subsequently many hundreds of Thebaw's relatives and members of his court were put to fearful tortures and slaughtered, women being ripped up and children's brains being dashed out against the walls. These acts caused great excitement in British India, and led to the withdrawal of the British resident. This massacre was followed by others even more horrible, and the embassy was finally forced to leave Mandalay, the capital, intimating that all foreigners had better follow.

The British army of invasion numbers about twelve thousand men, with about three thousand camp followers. The first engagement will probably occur when the British flotilla bombards the Minhala forts under the command of Gen. Prendegrast. The army is advancing in three brigades, the naval brigade manning the government river steamer Irrawaddy, armed with 20-pounders and machine guns, ten steam launches and other iron-plated river vessels, the British war ships drawing too much water to pass up the river. The sailors are from H. M. S. S. Woodlark, Bacchante, Turquoise, and other ships of the East Indian squadron under Admiral Sir Frederick Roberts.

WRITING IN POT HOOKS.

The Shorthand Art and the Long and Short of Its Value.

New York Telegraph: The army of shorthand writers is ever on the increase. Within the past few years stenographers have multiplied wonderfully. In New York city alone they are to-day legion; they are everywhere present all over the business part of the city. The professional man, merchant, banker, or broker transacting any considerable amount of business calls in the aid of the pen of a disciple of "the beautiful art," and finds his assistance not only extremely convenient, but almost invaluable. Twice or thrice the amount of correspondence and office work generally may be accomplished now than used to be possible in the days before the practical utilization of shorthand, and what may be termed its twin brother—type writing—had become so common. Indeed, the expediency of shorthand is as indispensable nowadays to the average down-town business man as is the district messenger service, the telephone, the elevated, or the blithesome "ticker"—all comparatively recent time and labor economizers.

A new field had thus opened to the aspiring young man and woman, and if the young amanuensis or reporter possesses the true go-ahead spirit, his chances for rapid advancement are better than those of the young dry goods clerk, for instance. Unless the shorthand tryo is animated by ambition and is industrious, he will never be worth his salt, but will be sent to the right-about in much shorter order than he could stenograph his employer's speech of dismissal. He is not wanted. Therefore it is useless for those not not by nature gifted with intelligence, pluck, and, above all, perseverance, to attempt shorthand as a means of livelihood. It is a popular fallacy that any one can become a stenographer who likes, and often the youth failing at other pursuits resorts to shorthand, never doubting success. If he has failed at other employments he will undoubtedly think also at shorthand, to be successful at which a clear headpiece, ready hand, and determination are highly essential. The proportion of really competent and successful stenographers developed is about in the ratio of one out of ten who commence the study of the art. It is to their own credit that there are to-day in New York city thousands of men and women who make a good living at shorthand.

It is undoubtedly a fact that the high character of the stenographer's profession is not appreciated by the general public, and it is equally the fact that this unpleasant state of affairs is caused by the stenographers themselves, who in their efforts to get ahead of one another lower their dignity very materially. Owing to this jealousy among themselves there are no regular "labor unions" and mutual aid associations among the guild, though the day cannot be far distant when such organizations must become a necessity. There exists unorganized clubs in New York which make no attempt to regulate prices, but are merely of a social tendency where matters stenographic and otherwise are informally discussed and encouraged. Initiation fees for admission to these are trifling, and the speed required of members varies, a few clubs placing the standard as high as 150 words per minute, and some as low as 100, the usual speed required being the "taking" of 125 or 130 words easily and legibly. Any "respectable person" who can pass the "examinations" to which he is subjected can usually join whichever club he wishes, regardless of what "system" he writes. At the regular meetings of these clubs a certain portion of the time is allotted to dictation, one or more members reading to the rest, who "take" them. This method is a very efficacious way of gaining speed.

Phonography is by far the best and most used of any other forms of stenography. Isaac Pitman, of England, is its real founder, and all modern methods of phonography owe their existence to him, the leading principles being all copied from him. Some of the so-called independent systems that have arisen since Mr. Pitman's inventions are improvements in matters of detail over their original. There is of course, great rivalry between them, and much "mine is superior to yours" talk. Nearly all of them are worthy productions, and it is difficult to choose between them. Any one of them learned thoroughly will win a handsome income, which is the main desideratum.

Salaries range from $10 per week, received by beginners and third-rate stenographers, all the way up to $25,000 a year, which is the sum earned by Mr. Dennis F. Murphy, official stenographer of the United States senate, which is probably as much as any shorthander in this country can well make. Mr. James E. Munson, official stenographer of the New York superior court, is paid a salary of $7,000 per year, and he unquestionably receives as much again from the sale of his publications and from his work outside of the court room. Twenty-five dollars a week is good pay for the young amanuensis in railroad, insurance and other offices, many earning much more.

A first-class law reporter employed by lawyers wishing special reports of cases can make as high as $7,000 and $8,000 per annum. The usual amount paid a shorthand reporter for a sermon, lecture, or public meeting range between $10 and $20. An official stenographer is assigned to each of the various courts in the city, and are each paid $2,500, and they make twice that at least by furnishing reports to lawyers and by outside work. Men stenographers receive higher pay than women, though some women are to be found who earn as high as $5,000 and $6,000 a year, and one or two in New York city perhaps more.

As to the speed possible to be attained in shorthand, it of course depends wholly upon the writer's skill. Mr. Dennis F. Murphy can easily roll off 200 words and more per minute, and Mr. Thomas Reed, of London, who enjoyed the exciting diversion of reporting Dr. Phillips Brooks during the latter's recent visit to England, "got there" to the tune of 213 words a minute, and never lost a word. A speed of 180 words per minute, sustained throughout a whole evening, perhaps is not unusual, and a stenographer who aspires to a leading place in his profession must be able to run up as high as that and think nothing of it, though the average rate of public speaking seldom exceeds 150 words—always excepting Dr. Brooks, of Boston, who is a "terror" to the verbatim reporter.

HOUSEKEEPERS that fail to acquaint themselves with the value of JAMES PYLE'S PEARLINE in the kitchen and laundry deprive themselves of the most convenient and useful article of the age.

Baldwin and His Son.

Chicago Herald: The evidence in a murder trial just closed at Atchison, Kan., indicates that old Mr. Baldwin was miserly, that his only son might have a motive for taking the life of his only daughter. The elder Baldwin was penurious to a degree which rendered him intensely unpopular with his acquaintances, but he succeeded in amassing about $10,000 in money, and when he died about a year ago he left it to his widow and two children. His son was a spendthrift who dissipated his inheritance in short order, and returning to his home without money he endeavored to secure from his mother and sister an advance on that portion of the estate which might come to him after his mother's death. In this he was unsuccessful, and some ill feeling was occasioned in consequence.

One morning last July Miss Baldwin, who was soon to be married to a young man in Atchison, was found dead in her bed with a pillow over her face. An empty bottle which had contained chloroform was lying on the floor, and everything indicated that the girl had died from the effects of that drug. The guilty party had effected an entrance to the house by removing a panel in the rear door, and, though several bureaus had been ransacked, it was not noticed that anything had been stolen. The burglary and suicide theories soon gave way to an open suspicion to her brother. His conduct was peculiar, and his agitation at times when officers were conversing with him concerning the crime was so pronounced that they finally took him into custody. Although there was absolutely no evidence against him he was held on suspicion, and the authorities proceeded to work up the case against him.

To the surprise of everybody the prosecution has showed that he bought chloroform in St. Joseph, Mo., a week or two before the murder, and the druggist who made the sale identified him and recognized the empty bottle found by the side of the murdered girl as one of a peculiar pattern which he remembered having used on that occasion. The evidence of this witness was considered almost conclusive as to the guilt of the young man, who was himself almost doumbfounded when it was introduced. His conviction is a sorry outcome to the selfdenial and scrimping parsimony of the father who saved that his son might murder.

caused by OVERWORK, or WORRY, the INDISCRETIONS OF YOUTH, or EXCESSES of riper years, or whatever may tend to lower the tone of life's vital forces, causing nervous and physical debility, or exhaustion, sudden weakness in confidence, impotency, premature decay, followed by the long train of symptoms which the sufferer knows but too well, are cured by our new restorative treatment, renewing vitality and vigor, and restoring vital physical and mental power.

The treatment of this class of diseases has until very recently been neglected by scientific, educated physicians, and has been in the hands of Patent Medicine vendors and ignorant men claiming to have one medicine that was a specific and would cure every case.

We know that thousands suffering the effects of these vices have been disappointed so often that they are discouraged and have almost given up hope of ever being cured. To all such we desire to say that so long as they continue to experiment with specific remedies or appliances represented to cure such diseases, they are like y to meet with nothing but disappointment. No two cases are exactly alike and no one remedy ever has been or ever can be prepared to meet the requirements of all. We have made a careful study of these diseases in all their various forms and complications, and with the aid of an almost unlimited experience in adapting treatment to individual cases, we are enabled to cure after others have utterly failed.

We were among the first to make a specialty and study of this class of diseases, and to treat them upon scientific principles. We also treat Strictures, Gleet and Varicocele. ALL CONTAGIOUS AND BLOOD DISEASES, from whatever cause produced, successfully treated. We can remove Syphilitic poison from the system without mercury, or injury to the system.

ALL CONSULTATIONS CONFIDENTIAL. Call and consult us or send name and post-office address, plainly written, and enclose stamp and we will send you, in plain wrapper, our PRIVATE CIRCULAR TO MEN, UPON PRIVATE, SPECIAL AND NERVOUS DISEASES, SEMINAL WEAKNESS, SPERMATORRHŒA, IMPOTENCY, SYPHILIS, GONORRHŒA, GLEET, and ALL DISEASES OF THE GENITO URINARY ORGANS, or send history of your case for an opinion.

Persons unable to visit us may be treated at their homes, by correspondence. Medicines and instruments sent by mail or express SECURELY PACKED FROM OBSERVATION, no marks to indicate contents or sender. One personal interview preferred if convenient. Fifty rooms for the accommodation of patients. Board and attendance at reasonable rates.
