CARING FOR THE VETERANS

Generous Provision Made for Iowa's Needy Comrades.

THE SOLDIERS' HOME AT MARSHALLTOWN

Preparations for the Nineteenth Annual Encampment at Keokuk—How the Colonel Was Saved—A Successful Game of Bluff.

The following circular issued by the committee of the soldiers home of Iowa, has been approved by the department commander:

The ten cottages provided for by the Twenty-fourth general assembly at the soldiers home at Marshalltown, are completed, and are now ready for occupancy. Only ten veterans and their wives can occupy them, but there are over forty applications on file, from those who desire to do so. The cottages are well built, conveniently arranged, and their appearance very creditable indeed, and they add materially to the homelike appearance of the grounds. Meantime, there are many of our needy comrades and their wives, who should be provided with just such comfortable homes, without waiting two years, or until the legislature meets again. To this end you are asked to continue the work already begun, and build more cottages as soon as possible. There should be at least twenty more cottages built within the next year, and this work can easily be accomplished if we only put forth the necessary efforts. What post will have the credit of building the first one?

It should be understood, that as uniformity is essential in building these cottages, that the plans must be approved by the commissioner of the home. In due time, after funds are raised or pledged sufficient to build three or four cottages, a plan will be adopted, and and information sent out as to the exact cost, which will not be less than $350, or more than $500 each. But now is the time to commence work in this line, and it is recommended that every post proceed at once and start a fund for this purpose. Those posts that think they are too weak to undertake the erection of a cottage alone, can raise funds that will be applied to the purpose, under the direction of the commissioners of the home, the funds, of course, passing through our department treasury and disbursed as other funds appropriated to charitable purposes.

The cottages already built are furnished, throughout, with the exception of stoves, by the Women's Relief Corps of our department, and it is safe to say that they will do the same for such as may hereafter be built.

Iowa Department Notes.

General order No. 9, issued by J. J. Sleadman, department commander of Iowa, contains important information for Iowa veterans.

The department commander desires to announce that the dates arranged for holding the nineteenth annual encampment, Department of Iowa, Grand Army of the Republic, are Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 25, 26 and 27, 1893.

It is the purpose of the citizens of Keokuk and the comrades of that city to make the nineteenth annual encampment one of the most notable in the history of the department. The natural environment of the city, its beautiful surroundings and its hospitable people insure a most satisfactory and interesting session.

Many comrades of national reputation have been invited to attend the encampment, among whom are General Schofield, commander-in-chief of the United States army; General Noble, secretary of the interior; General Weissert, commander-in-chief; and Major Warner, past commander-in-chief Grand Army of the Republic; General G. M. Dodge and General Prentice. From some of them have already been received positive assurance of their presence, while it is confidently expected that all will attend. The presence of these distinguished men, with others, who will be invited, makes it absolutely certain that the encampment will be resplendent with oratorical talent.

A movement has been started which will result in bringing to the encampment on the day of the parade several thousand comrades from Missouri and Illinois. It is expected that each of these states will have in line on the day of the parade a larger delegation than attended the national encampment at Washington. These visiting delegations will be under the command of their respective department officers and it is the purpose to make the parade on the first day of the encampment a repetition, so far as it is possible, of that memorable parade witnessed on Pennsylvania avenue at the national encampment.

It will be remembered that many of our comrades have been laid to rest in the National cemetery at Keokuk, which is one of the most beautiful in the United States. Excursions on the Mississippi river will be given to points of historic interest, and in general it may be stated that no expense will be spared to give the comrades of Iowa a royal welcome. District commanders should at once put themselves in communication with staff officers in their respective divisions, to the end that every post in the department may send a large delegation to this encampment.

The Colonel Must Be Saved.

A Louisville Courier-Journal reporter once spent three days in the early summer at the Rockridge Alum springs during Colonel Thomas Peyton's administration, and those three days will always be remembered as the pleasantest that he ever experienced. The colonel talked incessantly, and was always surrounded by a group of eager listeners.

One of the colonel's stories concerned Colonel Blank, who commanded a dashing Virginia regiment in A. P. Hill's corps. On one occasion this particular regiment had been detached on special duty and was some distance away from the main body of Lee's army and without support. One day the command was in camp on the bank of a small stream, a little too deep, however, to ford. The colonel's tent, with those of one of the companies, was on the side of the stream away from the enemy, who were known to be not far off. The other companies were on the enemy's side of the creek, which was spanned by a small wooden bridge. During the day pickets brought in news that the federals had begun a rapid advance in force and would soon be upon them. There was considerable consternation and the captains of the companies on the enemy's side of the stream were preparing to cross it to the other side when, to their surprise, they saw some of their own men attack the bridge with axes. In all haste they ordered the work to be stopped and were talking with the workmen when Colonel Blank rode up to the opposite side of the stream in a great rage.

"Cut down that bridge!" he ordered in tones of thunder.

"But, colonel, ——" one of the subordinate officers interposed.

"Never mind, sir!" shouted the colonel, red in the face with wrath. "Never mind, sir! I know what I am doing! The enemy is coming, sir, and by destroying the bridge I will be able to retire in good order."

"But, colonel, what will become of the regiment?" asked another captain.

"Oh, d—n the regiment!" yelled the colonel. "What does it matter about the regiment, anyway? The colonel must be saved, sir. Cut down that bridge."

But the other officers took the matter into their own hands and the bridge remained intact until the last confederate soldier had crossed and then it was cut down. The enemy soon came up, but were checked long enough at the stream to allow Colonel Blank and his regiment to regain the main army.
