AUSTIN IS CITY CHAMPION

Regains the Title at the Lawn Tennis Tournament.

HASKELL TAKES ONE SET OUT OF FOUR

Victor Loses Only Three Games in Three Sets, but the Third Set Takes Twenty-Two Games to Decide.

The hotly contested city tournament of the Omaha Tennis club has come to a close. All the young women who have been most interested spectators of the games will now have a chance to swap pin money. Possibly some of their masculine escorts will also cash in small amounts. The final contest was a close one, for each young gladiator of the racket has held the championship alternate seasons and both were equal favorites with the crowd. The play at times was highly exciting, and cheers were frequent until the conclusion of the fourth set. It has been decided that Roy Austin will carry the championship pennant for the present year.

Early in the evening admirers of the game began to arrive and by 6:30 every available inch of the seats surrounding the court was occupied. The feminine friends of the players were in the majority, and cries from them of "Good, good!" rose in shrill cadences as soon as the game was fairly under way. One thing was easily demonstrated at an early stage of the contest, that was that the feminine contingent needed no coaching from their male escorts, and a good play met with a prompt reward if well distributed applause goes for much.

The courts were in excellent trim. There was not a particle of breeze, and the contestants went at their work with a grim determination to win. In the opening game Haskell knocked the dust out of his opponent's court with rapid returns delivered with unerring accuracy. He played in his best form and won with points standing 4-2. In the next game fate appeared to dally with the sturdy young champion, for the balls, though played with the same care and force as in the first, either fell short or skimmed the lines a few inches to the bad. The score was Austin's, going on his tab as a love game. The next game was a duplicate of the second. Austin took four more games and the set at 6-1.

In the second set Haskell changed courts with the victor, and from the manner in which he went to work it was evident he intended to hustle. It was in vain. Balls which he returned with a force that sent the bleachers wild with enthusiasm bounded back from the racket of his opponent. Some of Austin's returns were made in a listless, lazy manner which produced miraculous results. High drives, back-handed returns, lobs and long runs were performed by him evidently with scarcely an effort. His serving was swift and straight, not a double fault being called upon him during the contest. Toward the end of the set he tired the man on the other side by chasing him all over the court, and won the set without losing a game.

The third set started in with Haskell in the lead. Games one, two and three were corralled by him in short order. Four and five went to Austin, and then each man settled down to his work with an ardor which promised good things for the spectators. The sixth game went to Haskell, then two more to Austin, the seventh to Austin, the eighth to Haskell and the games stood five all. Then the players went after the vantage game like knights of the tourney in days of old. Haskell managed to lead his opponent for five games, when Austin captured the vantage, but failed to get the next. Haskell gained the next vantage game, but fell down on the next. The games stood ten all when Haskell took the next into camp and then won the final with the spectators standing on their seats amid a storm of handkerchief waving. The score stood 12-10 for Haskell.

In the last set it was evident that the hot work had told upon Haskell, and though he won games two and four the fates were against him. Austin concluded the set with a score of 6-2, winning the championship. Following is the score by points:

First set:

Austin	2	4	4	5	5	4	4	—6
Haskell	4	0	0	3	3	0	2	—2

Second set:

Austin	4	5	4	5	4	4	4	—6

Brewers to Take a Trip.

The Omaha Brewing Association Base Ball club will leave on a two weeks' trip through Nebraska next Tuesday. They will play at Fremont, Columbus, Central City, Grand Island, Hastings, West Point, Norfolk, Neligh and O'Neill. The Brewers are playing fast ball and they expect to take every game, so that when they return home they will have an undisputed claim to the championship of Nebraska. The team will be composed of the following players: O. Shannon, R. Shannon, Waller, Bowman, Kleffner, Rooney, Vapor, Holmes, Davis and Scully.

Americans Lose to M. C. C. and Ground

(Copyright, 1897, by Press Publishing Company.)

LONDON, July 24.—(New York World Cable.)—Special Telegram.)—The American cricketers brought the thirteenth game of their English tour to a conclusion here today and suffered the seventh defeat of the trip. They were defeated by Marylebone club and ground by 127 runs. The visitors, however, were considerably handicapped today by the enforced absence of G. S. Patterson, the captain of the team, and undoubtedly the best batsman. He was unable to take part in the game, owing to his injured hand, and the Americans in consequence played only ten men. The batting of J. A. Lester was the feature of the play. Against the bowling of the crack professionals, J. T. Hearne, A. E. Trott and Rawlin, he compiled an innings of 71, without offering the semblance of a chance, and if he had had Patterson to back up his efforts the game would probably have ended in a draw. F. H. Bohlen, L. Biddle and E. N. Crosby all made strenuous efforts to save the game, and steady play ruled, but the professional bowling proved too much for the other mits and the total only reached 152.

EDWARD L. BAKER.

Two of His Last Poems to His Little Grandson, Philip.

The recent death of the United States consul general, Edward L. Baker, in Buenos Ayres, has been the occasion of much comment throughout the west, and particularly in Illinois, where Mr. Baker was at one time a prominent figure in journalism and politics. It has been so long since his appointment by President Lincoln to the honorable post in the consular service in the Argentine Republic that the present generation has but little appreciation of the worth of the man, his work as an editor of the "Illinois State Journal" and his influence with the politicians who were grouped together before the war in Springfield and drew their inspiration from the noble leadership of Abraham Lincoln. Associated with him for several years in the government service at the capital of the Argentine Republic, writes George W. Fishback in the Globe-Democrat, I came to know him most intimately and learned to love him with a tenderness and reverence given to but very few men in my limited world. In the consular service he was at the very head of the list, and was retained at his post by all the administrations since President Lincoln's election, his reports standing today in the department at Washington as models of perspicuous statement and beautiful English diction.

The duties of Mr. Baker's position were not always arduous, and gave him from time to time the coveted opportunity of indulging his literary tastes. His reading was most extensive, embracing the whole realm of English letters, his fondness for the early writers never deserting him, and his critical faculty never failing to extract and enjoy the choice developments of modern literature. Nothing, however, in all his exile could divorce him from his interest in the newspaper progress of his native country. His attachment to journalism was the pleasure of his whole life. He was a constant reader of all the leading papers of this country, and kept himself thoroughly informed as to the party principles and leading men of all the states. He wrote much but not for the public eye. His poetical talent was a rare quality, which he indulged only for the pleasure of his chosen friends. It is understood his writings have been preserved by his family.

In the intimacy of our friendship, he one day gave me a copy of two of his latest poems, the one complementing the other and both forming one of the most pathetic and beautiful expressions of personal affection I have ever read. The lines were wrung from his heart by the departure of his little grandson, Philip Randolph Baker, on a voyage from Buenos Ayres to New York. You will be pleased, I am sure, to print them.

LA DESPEDIDA.

I.

My gallant ship—beside what fate—
Has sailed today with precious freight
Far down the bay, with wind abeam
I see her white sails fill and gleam;
And I shall see them when I sleep
Like phantoms gliding o'er the deep;
And I shall see them when I wake,
Through all the weary leagues they make!
Oh! treacherous ocean, faithless sea,
Guard well what I have give thee.

II.

Or in the day or in the night,
That ship is ever in my sight;
Each course she takes—each wind that blows,
Each wave that breaks and overflows—
Or, sail she slow, or sail in haste,
I watch her through the trackless waste;
In calm or storm or gentle breeze,
I joy or fear with each of these!
Oh! treacherous ocean, faithless sea,
I pray that thou keep faith with me!

III.

With grief I never can forget,
And breaking heart, and eyes all wet,
And desolated home, I see
My heart's dear treasures pass from me;
And I shall mourn as one distraught—
So grand the sorrow love hath wrought—
Till I shall know all danger's o'er—
My ship has reached her destined shore!
Oh! treacherous ocean, faithless sea,
Bring back a good report to me.

EDWARD L. BAKER.

Buenos Ayres, February 12, 1894.

LA BIENVENIDA.

I.

A magic word at lightning speed
Has come to me with news indeed!
My ship that erstwhile sailed so far,
Has made the peril-ridden crossed the bar!
Her flags aloft are flying free
The blue waves dance along her prow,
With landward breeze and sails at play,
She moves in triumph up the bay!
Oh! treacherous ocean, faithless sea,
Glad tidings these I have from thee!

II.

I saw that ship from me depart
With boding fear and breaking heart,
I watched her course with such a grief
That hope could offer no relief;
Today—thank God—her perils over—
I hail her from this distant shore—
With greetings of my inmost soul,
And joy, my eyes cannot control.
Oh! treacherous ocean, faithless sea,
Thou hast indeed been true to me.

III.

Oh, weary prisoners, long confined
Midst perils of the wave and wind!
Of storm and wreck all fears have passed,
The haven for land is yours at last;
I hail you all with untold love
And peace that cometh from above!
Oh dear, good ship, oh! dear, good crew,
In gratitude I pledge to you!
Oh! treacherous ocean, faithless sea,
Most fervent thanks thou hast from me!

Applause for the Heroic Drummer.

A Bangor, Me., drummer recently saw a woman enter the train at North Rockport and rush through the car just as it was getting speedy. He coolly walked after her, and just before the fatal leap grasped her firmly to his manly bosom. She struggled, but he only tightened his grip, saying: "Madam, you shan't jump off the car and kill yourself!" When she got her breath she shrieked: "You big fool, I was only going out on the platform to wave my handkerchief to my friends." A party of Bangor yachtsmen aboard the train applauded the drummer for his heroism fully half an hour and at intervals thereafter.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is positive evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Omaha Sunday Bee and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

BOSTON, 5; LOUISVILLE, 2.

LOUISVILLE, July 24.—Fraser pitched a fine game until the sixth inning, when two bases on balls, two errors and a stolen base gave the Beaneaters three runs and the game. Klobedanz was taken out of the box in the sixth, after he had filled the bases. Nichols, who was substituted, started in, retiring the side without a run. CLEVELAND, 9; PHILADELPHIA, 6.

CLEVELAND, O., July 24.—At the end of the eighth today the Phillies had the Indians beaten, but the game was decided against them 9 to 6 in the end of the ninth. Emslie having been sent to Cincinnati, McGinty, the Cleveland substitute, and Boyle of the Phillies acted as umpires. McGinty was judging balls and strikes. In the ninth he sent Zimmer to first on balls. Then he called two balls on Tebeau. The Phillies began to object and the game was delayed. Play was, however, resumed after a time. Next McGinty called a ball and two strikes. The Phillies again protested. The next ball pitched was called a ball, giving the batter first. Then the visitors refused to play. At the expiration of three minutes McGinty gave the game to Cleveland. Score:
