SEVENTEENTH AND HARNEY STS.

COLLEGE NOTES.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.

Every arrangement is being made for the accommodation of the largest school next year in the history of the institution. The fixtures and furnishings of the college in every department are unapproached in any city west of Chicago. The Commercial Department is furnished with fine roll top desks for all students. These desks are made of solid golden oak, carefully designed and supplied with combination locks. The hand finished, revolving office chairs with which the entire department is seated give this large assembly hall the appearance of an immense counting room.

BANKING AND WHOLESALE DEPARTMENT

The banking fixtures for the Banking and Wholesale Department are as fine as can be found in any banking house. They are of the finest Flemish oak, ornamented with exquisite carving, Mexican marble and superb metal work. So far as is known but one other business college in the United States furnishes its students with such expensive, modern and up-to-date conveniences. Certainly the students of this department have everything that would actuate them to a better education, higher attainments and a determination to be a success in the business world.

SHORTHAND AND TYPEWRITING DEPARTMENT

The Shorthand and Typewriting Departments are also furnished with the latest and best of everything. The Yale lock, Oxford box desks, finished in solid golden oak ornament the study room of this department. They were especially designed and made to order, and are the first of the kind manufactured. The equipment is ideal and no expense has been spared to make it the very acme of convenience, comfort and elegance.

HOME OF THE SCHOOL

For twelve years the school has occupied quarters in the elegant stone front building, corner of 17th and Harney streets. The building is fire proof, its rooms and halls are well lighted and ventilated, elevator service, and everything arranged for the health, rapid progress and thorough work of the students. Such facilities are within themselves a source of higher education, culture and refinement. Call and see a modern equipment of a model institution.

FACULTY

The management of the Nebraska Business College has spared neither time nor expense in securing the best qualified instructors to be had east or west. Recently there have been added to the faculty two more teachers, Prof. Zimmer of Nashua, N. H., and Miss Miller of Shelbina, Mo. They are highly qualified, each being a graduate of three different institutions, and have had years of practical experience. It is a rule of the management to employ none but college people in any department. If you are seeking the instruction of the most able teachers money will employ, we would be pleased to have you investigate for yourself the methods, discipline and character of the school.

GREGG SHORTHAND

A shorthand system to be of any use must be rapid. If it is not fast enough to take down in readable form speech as it is uttered it is of no use. The Gregg system has neither shading nor position, and while its outlines are as short as those of other systems, this brevity is not secured by complicated or cramped contractions. As there is but one outline for each word it will come to the mind promptly, and as that outline is written without position, shade, backward strokes, obtuse angles or cramped joining, there is nothing to check the hand. The instructors are graduates of the Gregg School for teachers and other institutions and students who are under their tuition will become skillful shorthand writers. For very good reasons the Nebraska Business College is the only school in Omaha that makes a specialty of this system. Apply for catalogue, bound in alligator, finest ever published by a business college. B—
