Truly, a Great Sale

The First Day Was a Whirlwind

Never in the history of our store did we have such a crowd as we had on the opening day of this Great January Sale. The [illegible] were here just as we advertised them. The prices, well, we only know that quick action began at the stroke [illegible] the eight o'clock bell, and continued unabated until closing time. Everywhere from the basement to the first and second floors there were enthusiastic buyers eagerly taking advantage of the great price reductions. They seemed delighted with the bargains.

We have prepared for the second day of our great January sale with another tempting array of bargains. Be here early Thursday morning if you will share in these great economies.

Sale Commences at 8 a. m.

Wednesday, the Great January Sale of Beautiful Dress Goods and Silk Was a Truly Wonderful Sight.

There is always an immense business here during our Great January Clearing Sale, but Wednesday's selling broke the records in dress goods and silks for the first day's selling of any previous January Clearing Sale. First of all, the dress goods and silks we are selling are of the beautiful style and quality you always find at Thompson, Belden & Co.'s. The colors are charming, including the exquisite shades and styles that are seldom, if ever, to be had at these special prices. All fairly sparkle with newness and beauty. In fact, many of the pretty shades of gray are next season's ideas and color effects. It's hard to convey with any degree of adequacy the beauty or the extent of the sweeping reductions or great value. We merely hint of a few special items.

The Season's Most Desirable Black Dress Goods Go Into the Great January Clearing Sale.

We never gave you such values at any previous Clearing Sale.

OPEN SATURDAY EVENING.

THOMPSON BELDEN & CO.

HOWARD CORNER SIXTEENTH STREET.

ever, because as head of the committee on employes for the senate he has to act as reception committee for a horde of office seekers who are trying to get on the senate pay roll. All day Wednesday he was surrounded by a crowd whenever he appeared in public, and his only chance to do any work was to lock himself in some other senator's room. The committee on employes announced today it would not fill any positions until the work of the senate demanded. This is in accordance with the party's pledge for economy of administration. The places not provided for now will be filled as necessity requires in order that the pay roll may be kept down as small as possible.

Sheldon's bill, passed by the last legislature, will do a great deal toward shutting off many of the sinecures which have padded the pay rolls heretofore. Under the Sheldon law the number of employes who may be placed on the senatorial pay roll is limited to forty-eight, and the offices are designated in the bill. At previous sessions the pay roll contained the names of about sixty-five persons. Under the old rule the senate could employ as many helpers as the political situation in the various senatorial districts required. While this bill will effect a saving to the taxpayers, it is not helping to lighten the burden resting on the shoulders of the members whose duties it is to recommend the employes, as there are applicants enough to fill every place two or three times.

Fewer Applicants Than Usual.

Although there are plenty of place seekers on the ground, old members of the legislature remark on the fact there are a smaller number than there have been at former sessions. This, they say, is due to the fact that now every office seeker, as well as every legislator, walks or pays good, hard cash for his transportation. Naturally, if an applicant for a petty position had to face the expenditure of money for tickets both ways to and from Lincoln, he would be sure of his ground before coming to Lincoln. The reduction in the number of place seekers is the one ray of light in the pass situation for the legislator. And, as Mike Lee expressed it, "Just think of the crowds that are waiting down there in Omaha for a telegram or a telephone message from the front."

The senate caucus Monday voted that the majority members who had an elective officer credited to them would not be entitled to any appointive officers, but the members who had no elective officer would be entitled to two appointive officers. It is under this caucus rule the employes committee has been sifting through the mass of recommendations. The committee announces while it has not filled all the places that will be filled now, it is not from lack of material, but because it is undecided between two applicants and is waiting for further conferences with the members concerned.

The Sheldon law provides for these officers and limits them to the following: President pro tem, secretary, two assistant secretaries, one clerk committee of the whole, one chaplain, one sergeant-at-arms, one assistant sergeant-at-arms, one doorkeeper, one assistant doorkeeper, one postmaster one mail carrier, one bill clerk, one assistant bill clerk, one bookkeeper, custodian, one custodian of cloak room, eight stenographers, two proofreaders, one clerk for lieutenant governor, one chief enrolling and engrossing clerk, seven copyists, three pages, one clerk judiciary committee, one clerk finance committee, four other clerks for the use of the senate and three janitors. This makes forty-eight employes in all.

Employes Decided On.

The following is a list of the employes so far decided upon by the committee and the senator by whom each is recommended:

L. P. Corrick, clerk committee of the whole, by Senator Sibley; J. R. Manning, doorkeeper, by Senator Randall; H. Wilsey, messenger, and Floy Geis, stenographer, by Senator Wilsey; Harriett Bardell, secretary, and Clarence Hopewell, page, by Lieutenant Governor Hopewell; Samuel Bush, janitor, by Senator Saunders; Harry Bradley, janitor, by Senator Aldrich; W. A. Shollenhart, mail carrier, by Senator Thorne; L. Ashenfelter, bill clerk, by Senator Sackett; J. H. Cleaver, bookkeeper, by Senator Wilson; Henry Beese, night watchman, by Senator Dodson; Eva Douglas, stenographer, by Senator Hanna; J. Cole, page, by Senator Gould; Rose Sweetman, stenographer, by Senator Thomas.

The elective officers of the senate have been charged as follows:

Secretary Goulding, to Senator Thompson; Sergeant-at-Arms Hober, to Senator King; Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms Schmeid, to Wiltse; First Assistant Secretary Reeder, to Goodrich.

One custodian has been charged to Senator Gibson who has not been decided upon yet.

Legislative Small Talk.

Hon. John L. Kennedy, defeated for reelection to congress from the Second district by Gilbert M. Hitchcock, was counted in by the speaker of the house of representatives today and for a second and a half was a congressman for another term. And in correcting the mistake Mike Lee again scored as a humorist. It happened this way. Speaker Nettleton was calling off the names of the successful candidates previous to declaring them elected and in reading so many republicans called the name of Kennedy. When he had concluded, his attention was called to the matter by Senator Wilsey.

"I hardly think it right, Mr. Speaker," he said, "even though we have a big majority to count in Mr. Kennedy when it is a matter of history Mr. Hitchcock was elected."

"Yes, yes," said the speaker, "I hope the members won't think I was trying to count in a republican just because we have a majority here. Mr. Hitchcock was elected congressman of the Second district. It was all a mistake."

"Yes, sir, the biggest mistake the people of the Second district ever made," chimed in Mike Lee, and the house expressed the same sentiment by its loud applause.

"I understand Governor Mickey went down today and bought eight beds preparatory to going to housekeeping," said a member of the upper house today.

"He's foolish if he doesn't apply to President Roosevelt for a federal appointment," chimed in a half dozen house members at once, and each seemed to know why the governor should stand a good chance of appointment.

Speaker Nettleton is good natured and genial; he appreciates a good joke. If these things were not true this incident would never be made a matter of record. A supreme court commissioner in commenting on the picture of the speaker published in The Bee this morning remarked:

"That's a good picture of the speaker, all right, but I believe it flatters him a little."

The legislators have certainly impressed some of the keepers of rooming houses in Lincoln with their importance. A young man called at a rooming house to get quarters for the winter.

"If you had come earlier I could have given you a room," the landlady said, "but just this morning I rented my last room to a couple of the congressmen. You know congress meets here this winter."

Time Evens Matters Up.

The whirligig of politics causes strange things to be brought to pass, but Representative Buckley of Polk county and Senator King, from the same place, are the heroes of about the most unusual incident that ever happened. Mr. Buckley is the first republican representative elected in Polk for twenty-two years, and the last republican representative from that county is the present Senator King. The fusionists took charge of Polk county when King went out of office twenty-two years ago and it was not redeemed until Buckley sewed it up this fall, with the help of the last republican representative, the present senator, Mr. King. Mr. Buckley is president of the Stromsburg bank and spends most of his time looking after his land, which about surrounds the town of Stromsburg.

References made to the presence each year of heads of state institutions lobbying for appropriations, has brought forth from a state superintendent the statement that the reason is in the action of legislative committees. This man said:

"I have no desire to be here and lobby for appropriations and think it wrong to do so, but the fault lies largely in the legislative committees. For instance, a state institution has in two appropriation bills. One for salary and one for miscellaneous purposes. When the first comes before the finance committee the superintendent is notified to be present. He comes to Lincoln to find the committee cannot meet at the time set, so he waits over until the next day. The same thing happens again. Then the second bill comes up and again he is sent for and again the first performance is repeated, so the superintendent has to spend much of his time here when he should be at his institution looking after the work he is paid to look after.

"I would suggest that the house and senate committee hold joint sessions when a state superintendent is sent for to explain the reason for certain appropriations, have the time of the meeting fixed and hold the meeting at that time. One trip could do all the work. This could be done very easily and when the senate committee came to act on the measure it would have the advantage of the explanation made to the joint committee.

"Of course, it is not necessary that the superintendent be sent for at all, if he makes it clear in his written statement to the legislature what he wants, but it always happens some members of the committee wants the superintendent to come and explain personally the reasons for the appropriations."

Nettleton at Work on Committees.

"I shall begin work on the committees tonight," said Speaker Nettleton today. "Most of the members have filed their preferences with me and they are being tabulated. No announcement of any committee appointment will be made until it is read to the legislature, and just when that will be I do not know."

Senator Millard's manipulating committee has about faded away and the hotel corridors remember it as a has-been. The effect of the boosters has been to inspire the legislators to call at the office of Norris Brown and again assure him that he was the choice of the republican state convention and the choice of the electors at the last election for the seat used by Senator Millard, and they intend to abide by that decision. In fact, the office of the attorney general was crowded at times during the day by legislators.

Superintendent Hayward of the Industrial school at Kearney is one superintendent who does not believe it is necessary to lobby in order to get an appropriation at the hands of the legislature.

"I have never had any trouble getting what the institution needs," said Mr. Hayward. "In times past I have filed my report and my statement of what is needed. The committee to whom the matter is referred has notified me if it desires any further explanation and I have come before the committee. I have never been turned down and I have never had to lobby for an appropriation. I have found the legislators fair and generous in their treatment of the institution at Kearney. I ask for only what is needed and that is what I get."

Fight for County Option.

It is generally conceded a strong fight will be made to secure the enactment of the county option law, which is backed by a number of temperance societies over the state. Thomas Darnall, who acts as lobbyist for the Anti-Saloon league, is already busily engaged in interviewing members of the legislature. Beside the county option measure legislation is proposed to prevent as far as possible the infraction of the spirit of the law by the express companies in communities where no license has been voted. In these prohibition communities the express companies ship large quantities of liquor consigned "C. O. D." The practice is said to be to deliver the packages to anyone who would sign for them and pay the charges. The express offices, it is asserted, in some communities at least, have become drinking places and much worse than open saloons would be. It is practically certain that some measure covering the matter will be introduced.

At the request of the legislative committee of the Order of Railway Conductors in this state, Senator Gibson will introduce a bill which will carry out one of the planks of the republican platform. It relates the liability of common carriers for the injury of their employes by accident. It provides that contributory negligence shall not be a bar to action, but shall be left to the jury to decide; that insurance or benefits received by the injured employe shall not affect his claim against the company, but relief benefits or other aid received from the company may be deducted from the amount recovered. Railroad men in all branches of the service are interested in the bill and it is said will make a fight to have it enacted.

LITTLE DOING IN THE SENATE

Governor Reports He Will Have Message Thursday.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

LINCOLN, Jan. 2.—(Special.)—The second session of the senate was as devoid of features as the first. It began at 10 o'clock. After prayer by the chaplain, Rev. G. W. Martin, a committee was appointed, consisting of Wilsey of Frontier, Root of Cass and Gould of Greeley, to confer with the house committee to arrange the joint session to canvass the votes cast at the last election. The committee appointed Tuesday to notify the governor the legislature was ready to receive communications from him reported the chief executive would be ready to submit his message Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The senate tendered the use of the senate chamber for the inaugural reception to be given Thursday night and then adjourned to meet in joint session with the house.

After the canvass of the votes the session was resumed at 11 o'clock. Senator Saunders of the committee on standing committees reported the committee on employes announced Tuesday night and the report was adopted. Mr. Saunders requested, in order to facilitate the work of naming the committees, that each member file his preferences with the chairman of the committee. The senate then adjourned until 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS OF HOUSE

Speaker Nettleton Authorized to Name Employes.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

LINCOLN, Jan. 2.—(Special.)—Speaker Nettleton called the house to order at 9 o'clock and Chief Clerk Barnard read the journal of the proceedings of the first day. The regular order of business of the last session was adopted.

Van Houten of Colfax moved the speaker appoint a committee to select house employes. The resolution was laid on the table on motion of Lee of Douglas, and on motion of Whitham the speaker was authorized to select the employes.

Raper of Pawnee introduced a resolution memorializing congress to take a hand in the affairs of the Congo Free State, in which he spoke of the inhuman treatment accorded the natives by King Leopold. This went over one day for action.

The chair appointed Tucker of Douglas, Raper of Pawnee and Henry of Holt to confer with a committee of the senate regarding a joint session to canvass the votes. A recess was then taken until 10:30.

Lieutenant Governor McGilton presided at the joint session. Secretary Goulding of the senate began reading the votes sent in by the various counties, when a motion was made and carried to accept the vote as certified to the house by the secretary of state. Speaker Nettleton then announced the election of those candidates certified by the secretary of state and already familiar to the people. The joint session adjourned to meet at 2 o'clock tomorrow, at which time the messages from the outgoing and incoming governors will be read. The house then adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow.
