JIM REED EXPLODES A BOMB

Former Mayor of Kansas City Hits Mayor of Omaha.

BUT HE AIMS AT ROOSEVELT

"People Have Had Enough of the Jangle of Cowboy Spur in Executive," He Says in Banquet Speech.

"The people have had enough of the jangle of the spur of the cowboy in the executive office."

When former Mayor "Jim" Reed of Kansas City uttered those words at the banquet given by the Dahlman Democracy to William Jennings Bryan and other notables at the Auditorium Saturday night, the mayor of Omaha, whose name the club bears, suddenly became the cynosure of every eye within range. But the mayor of Omaha knew that his guest and friend from Kansas City was jabbing at the president of the United States and not the cowboy executive of the Nebraska metropolis.

But anyhow it was a bomb that made a loud noise in significance and local democrats are wondering just what the former mayor of Kansas City thought he was doing when he made that speech and if the speech had been prepared with the special object of "handing a package" to the godfather of the club.

If this were not so the speech could not have been more effective in that direction, for its main feature was an attack on the personality of President Roosevelt.

Now, personally, the mayor of Omaha greatly admires the chief executive of the nation. When Mr. Dahlman led his cowboys down Pennsylvania avenue on the day of the inaugural parade the president was one of the men who cheered the westerners to the echo, and aside from W. J. Bryan it is doubtful if there be a democrat in the United States who could get the mayor's vote if Mr. Roosevelt is a candidate for the office.

When Mr. Reed opened his remarks dealing with the natural manner of the president and the fact that he has not permitted his election to interfere with his usual recreation those who knew of the personal admiration of the mayor for the president opened their eyes, but the climax came when Mr Reed declared that the people had "had enough of the jangle of the spur of the cowboy in executive office."

When this sentence was uttered Dahlman democracy held its breath, the distinguished guest of the evening, Mr. Bryan, was seen to whisper to the mayor and then the tense muscles of Mr. Dahlman's face relaxed and the astounded multitude knew that the incident would be permitted to pass for the time. Mr. Reed continued his speech and continued to heap ridicule and scorn upon the chief executive, not for his political policies and ideas, but on his mannerisms and personal characteristics. The mayor and those who knew of the feelings existing between the mayor and the chief executive of the nation wondered why the speaker did not "catch on" to the situation, but in ignorance, or pretended ignorance, of the sensation he was creating the Missourian continued, despite the fact that while President Roosevelt only admires the manly qualities of the cowboy, Mayor Dahlman was for years himself a cowboy and spread his fame to the four winds of the world when he threw the lariat over the head of Mr. Bryan in the harbor of New York.
