Two Women Among Castaways From Barkentine Wrecked Off Georgia Coast.

SHIP HIT BY TIDAL WAVE

Women Act as If Shipwrecks Were Natural Part of Sea Voyage-Hope Almost Abandoned When Steamship Manzanillo Comes to Rescue. New York .- Mate Charles E. Olsen of the American barkentine Ethel V.

Boynton, a bronze six-footer of Viking aspect and ancestry, recently arrived from Cuba with a vivid yarn of the wreck of his ship in hurricane blasts and ponderous seas off the Georgia coast.

The wife of the skipper, Capt. G. W. Waldemar, and his niece, Gladys Larrock of Boston, were in a ship's company of 13 all told that drifted six days lashed or grasping life lines on a raft and the detached deck house of the barkentine. Sharks swarmed around them at times and the more vigorous of the castaways, for diversion batted the big fellows over the snout whenever they came near enough to disturb the serenity of the niece and his wife acted as if shipwrecks were a natural part of a sea voyage and did not do any praying, as shipwrecked women are supposed to do in moments of unusual stress. Perhaps one thing that interfered with prayer, except of a mental sort, was the unremitting exertion of holding on and dodging wreckage and the crests of combers.

Girl Almost Loses Hope. On the morning of Monday, January 18, a few hours before succor came with the steamship Manzanillo, Miss Gladys had almost abandoned hope, and said to the mate: "We never shall see Boston." He laughed and, patting her on the shoulder, remarked: "Don't give up," She answered his laugh with a smile, and said: "We will die with stout hearts." She went to a hospital at Santiago with the rest, badly bruised and suffering from salt water boils, but she did not die.

The Boynton sailed from Mobile for Genoa on December 26 with a full cargo of lumber, a large part lashed on deck. Off the Florida coast on January 11 a heavy southeasterly gale lashed up tall seas and forced the lumber ship to heave to under storm trysall. The gale increased to a hurricane, and fearing she might pound out r bow in the crushing combers, th kipper turned tail to the blast and an miles to the northwest ander bere

The deck fonu shifted in the flight down the wind and the old ship began to leak. All hands were on deck, the starboard watch at the pumps and the port watch trying to jettleon the deck load, which imperiled the lives of all hands. The women were safe from the tumult in the after deck

The deck cargo, relieved of its lashings, went by the board on the morning of January 12. The Boynton was then waterlogged, her main deck almost awash, and floundering in the trough of the waves.

monster sea, which the mate called a "tidal wave," but which doubtless was a cumulative wave, or two or more waves rolled into one. rose 40 feet above the vessel and descended on the deck thunderously. It arched over some of the seamen. None was in its almost resistless course. It tore off 40 feet of the quarter deck.

At 2:30 o'clock the next morning a wave almost as big as the giant boarded the wreck and swept the forward house into the tumult. The men cut away the main and mizzen masts at daylight. The foremast later jammed itself through the bottom of the ship.

The yawl had escaped the smashing seas and an effort was made to launch it. The drifting lumber stove It in and finally it was broken to matchwood. The cargo below the main deck, forced up by the water. lifted the deck from the after house to the place where the forward house had been and the big section went salling off by itself and was soon out of view to leeward. The released beams and boards leaped and rolled out of the barkentine from both sides The skipper and the lusty mate, with the crew, attacked the after deck house and with axes and naked hands got off the top to use as a raft. All hands got aboard and the seas launched it.

The next morning, the mate says. he did something that no castaway in his memory of wrecks ever did; that is, as he said smilingly, "We sighted the main deck," which had drifted back in a shift of the gale. Rafts Lashed Together.

The smaller raft felt as if it might soon go to pieces and it was decided to board the main deck. Two hours of hard paddling with broken oars brought the little raft to the big one, and after lashing the two, the sea having gone down somewhat, all hands

Most of the shipwrecked were carried aboard the Manzanillo from her lifeboat. They were cared for generously aboard and taken to a hospital at Santiago. The skipper and his wife and niece are on their way to Mobile. Mate Olsen and the rest of the crew came here on the Monterey.

LAMB IS GREAT FOX CHASER

Raised With Litter of Pups, Kentucky Animal Develops Strange Characteristic.

Cynthiana, Ky.-Former Assessor John Ingles sold a lamb to J. D. Evans the other day because it insisted on chasing foxes and wouldn't stay at home. The lamb's mother early in its life disowned it and Mr. Ingles gave it to a dog which was raising a litter of hound pups. The lamb suckled at the breast of the dog, grew up with the pups and waxed strong and fleet of limb.

It rejoiced in the sport of the dogs and withal became quite a gay young thing. It ran rabbits to its heart's content, outstripping the dogs, but not knowing what to do with the rabbit when caught. The lamb would butt hogs to beat the band, and when the dogs treed a coon it would stand at the foot of the tree and try to bark. The stalwart mate says the skipper's Finally it got to chasing foxes and staying away from home so much Mr. Ingles thought the safest plan was to sell it.
