Referee of First Stecher-Lewis Go States His Views

There is one man in this country has any cinch to beat Ed Lewis when this giant pair of marvelous mat men meet in Gene Melady's new arena in Omaha on the afternoon of July 4.

His name is Bert Sisson; he is a writer of sports, and he comes from Evansville, Ind. It so happened that Bert was referee of the first contest between Stecher and Lewis last October in Evansville and it was he who called it a draw after the men had been on the mat for two hours and three minutes. Note the three minute part of it, since it has been variously stated that they went two hours and ten minutes and even longer than that.

After the contest that night, in which Lewis was badly injured by falling over the ropes and had to remain in the hospital for several days, Sisson made a statement of the affair. This was necessary because the mayor took a hand and held up the money.

Here are some of the salient points in Sisson's statement:

Lewis took Stecher to the mat four times.

Stecher was unable to take Lewis to the mat once.

Stecher never saw Lewis' back at any stage of the contest.

Lewis never once during the entire time made a single false move.

The Kentucky man's work on the defense was truly wonderful.

Lewis broke a finger in his right hand after forty-two minutes.

At the finish of the contest, Lewis, despite injuries, was the fresher.

These points, signed by the referee himself, make it appear that Lewis certainly has got a great chance of doing something far out of the ordinary when he takes holds with the Nebraska wonder on the national holiday. Lewis must have shown somewho does not believe that Joe Stecher thing wonderful that October day in Indiana because he did so much better with Stecher than any of the other wrestlers, American or European, has been able to do. Nobody came anywhere near to holding Joe to a draw—since, at least, he got good.

Rick and Quartet Of Other Drivers Enter Omaha Meet

Eddie Rickenbacher, winner of the 1915 Omaha gasoline classic, and ranked as one of the four leading drivers in the world, signed a contract yesterday to take part in the race this year which will be held on the East Omaha oval July 15.

Rickenbacher signed up to bring the Presto-Lite team to Omaha. He signed the papers at Des Moines after his victory there in the fifty-mile race Saturday. Pete Henderson, the diminutive driver who will be remembered as Eddie O'Donnell's mechanician last year, is a member of the Presto-Lite team. Both Rickenbacher and Henderson drive Maxwells.

Billy Chandler, who drove a Deusenberg here last year and is now captain of the Crawford team, also signed up yesterday to bring his trio of cars to Omaha. Chandler will drive one of the cars himself, while Art Johnson, who was Billy's mechanician last year, and Dave Lewis will drive the other two.

This brings the entry list for the Omaha race up to fourteen and among that fourteen are numbered the classiest drivers and cars in America. The drivers who had already entered the local classic are: Dario Resta, Ralph De Palma, Wilbur D'Alene, Earl Cooper, Tommy Milton, Ralph Mulford, Ira Vail, Charles Devlin and C. W. Thompson.

Sunnybrooks Win.
