Relative Feed Values Discussed By Cattle Men

Experiments at State Farm Show Sheep Fatten Best Without Silage; Animals Sold at Loss.

Lincoln, April 15.—(Special.)—Two hundred Nebraska live stock feeders met at the state farm here today to discuss the results of experiments in feeding cattle, hogs and sheep carried on by the agricultural college. Once more the records show that the standard ration of corn and alfalfa is most successful for fattening cattle and sheep at the least cost. And once more the difficulty of getting a profit from the industry was revealed. The main object of the experiments was to determine the relative value of various feeds.

Farmers who listened to the report of Professor Savin, which showed a loss on six lots of sheep ranging from 30 cents a head to $1.36, who said that he had been unusually successful and that most sheep men had lost more. The sheep were bought last November and kept on different kinds of feed until March 1. Those which had no silage made the best progress, the average gain a head of the 30 fed on corn and alfalfa being 34.61 pounds, and those fed on corn, alfalfa and silage, 28.90 pounds. They were bought at 12 cents a pound and the market slumped so that they were sold at 9.9 cents a pound. Five dollars worth of feed was required to put on 100 pounds of flesh.

Similar Showing in Hogs.

A similar story was told of the hog experiments by Professor Loefel. Of 10 separate lots of hogs those fed on corn and tankage and another lot fed on corn, tankage and semi-solid buttermilk made the best showing, with the latter a slight favorite, putting on 1.68 pounds a head a day as contrasted with 1.41 pounds for the lot on corn and tankage alone. The hogs were bought in November for $11.50 a hundred pounds and sold in February for $8 a hundred. The cost of adding 100 pounds weight ranged from $5.17 to $9.30, varying with the ration, and losses ranged from $5.62 a head to $10.55.

In discussing beef, the general opinion was that the best demand is for well-finished light steers, with fattened calves, known as baby beeves, showing the most promise of profit. Prof. H. L. Gramlich exhibited a scrut steer that put on 400 pounds of flesh in 150 days' feeding. Last November it was bought at $5.25 a hundred and is now worth $7 a hundred. Whereas this sort of animal would make a profit, better grade steers would not do so well and the better class cattle fed by the university showed a loss.

Supply Regulation Discussed.

The idea of regulating the supply of live stock on the market by the demand was uppermost in the meeting of the feeders. Many farmers spoke of the wisdom of a change of system by which feeder buying would not be concentrated at one particular season, thus preventing the necessity for throwing most of the fat stock on the market at the same time. The ultimate object sought by the live stock men is an arrangement by which the packers and other buyers would state how many cattle they could slaughter at a market at a given time and by which the stock men would provide so much and no more, thus endeavoring to hold the market steady, replacing wide price fluctuations by a narrow movement above and below a base line.
