Why you wear a smaller size in a Hanan

The foundation upon which a shoe is made is the last—most shoe manufacturers use lasts having a regular standard measurement, that's why so many shoes you wear do not fit, but are tight in one place and too loose in another.

The Hanan last is made on a more enlightened plan—not to so-called standard measurements, but to Hanan measurements that are based upon half a century's careful study of the true proportions of the human foot.

In Hanan shoes extra room is provided the big toe joint—the place where most shoes bind.

The original last—the one from which all the various sizes and widths are graded, is made by a Hanan. Around that last is made the Hanan shoe, from the best leather, by high-priced, skilled workmen but always the Hanan individuality.
