"BACK TO THE FARM"

VIII.—The Country Girl's Career.

By C. V. GREGORY.

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

OUR most appreciated blessings are seldom the ones that are closest at hand. Just as the country bred boy sometimes gets an idea that he has a genius too broad to be confined between the boundaries of his father's farm, so the girl who has grown up in the country sometimes gets a longing for a glimpse of the unknown world within the city's walls. The imaginative girl often feels that her talents will be more appreciated in the city than in the little home town. She imagines herself burning with a genius for acting, perhaps, and longs for the glare of the footlights and the plaudits of the crowd, or perhaps it is art in one of its many disguises that is calling her to the artificial life of paved streets and brick walls.

Occasionally it is the lights, the music and the pleasures of a swiftly flowing city life that attract the girl from the country, but not often. The girl who is a true daughter of the country is seldom deceived by the glare of a light whose shadow covers tears and sorrow or the pleasure that is but a mask for pain. We are told that the "glamour" of the city life is the force that draws the country girls to town. Nothing of the sort. There is little glamour about the city for the healthy girl. The first thought of the country girl when she finds herself in the city is "how dirty" or "how awfully crowded." But notwithstanding the dirt and the crowds she often remains. She stays because she is ambitious to have a "career." There is a true-hearted farmer boy back home probably who would be glad to take her into partnership. But in the past the girl has seldom been taught to look forward with pride to becoming a farmer's wife or to regard a life on the farm as being a career worthy of her ambition.

This is the natural outcome of the conditions for the quarter of a century when farmers were selling their produce below cost. The lot of the farmer's wife was one of almost unrelenting toil, as was that of the farmer himself. There was little to lighten the monotony of the ceaseless grind of housework. Her horizon was limited by the kitchen walls, and her highest ambition was to keep the boys out of the "best room." It is little wonder that she hoped for something better for her daughters. She saw unfolding in them her own girlhood, and she dreaded to see them spend their lives in the hopeless task of keeping body and soul together as she had done.

Her idea of city life was vague. Most of the city women she saw were well dressed, unwrinkled and seemingly happy. They were living the kind of life she would choose for her daughter. The toil of the wives of the poorer laborers she did not see. One of the main reasons that all through this period the country looked up to the city and the city looked down on the country was that country people saw only the best side of the city and the city people saw only the worst side of the country.

The change that has come about in country life in the past decade and a half is so great as to be almost unbelievable. Many of the country people themselves refuse to believe it. They read the reports of high prices skeptically, and not until the produce is sold and the money in their hands will they really believe their good fortune. Even then they will shake their heads and say that prices will surely go down before they have another crop ready for market. They have so long been content with a small return for their labor and no allowance at all for interest on their money or for the facility which they are selling away from their land that they can hardly believe that the time has come when the farmer is getting enough for his produce to enable him to put farming on a business basis.

Probably this change has affected no one on the farm more than the women. The country girl has a different idea of a career now. She lives in a modern farm home, or if she doesn't she knows that such homes exist and are well within the range of possibility for her. She has had her longing to see the world satisfied by visits to city friends and relatives. She has seen that all the conveniences of city homes are duplicated in the country. She has admired the spacious lawns and beautiful grounds of some of the best of the city houses, but she has been observant enough to note that such houses belong only to the few. She has gone to the theater with her friends and enjoyed it, but no more than she enjoys the homemade the arrivals in her home town or the plays and lectures she has attended in the larger country towns by trolley. She has been surprised to find that her friends in the city do not know their next door neighbor. The excuse that "they are not in our set" has puzzled her democratic little soul. It is different in the country, where every one sympathizes with every one else's sorrows and laughs with all in their joys.

The girl comes back from a trip to the city better satisfied than ever with her country home. Her father may not be worth more than $5,000 or $10,000 or $15,000 measured in money, but his house and grounds are equal in all essential respects to many of the millionaires' residences she saw in the city. Her girl friends in the city were coaxing their father to buy them an automobile so that they could "go some-where." The country girl and her mother have a horse and buggy that are sacred to their use. The horse is so gentle that he will not even hit his eyelid at an automobile and the buggy so shiny that they are proud to be seen anywhere in it. They can hitch up and go where and when they please. The laundry in the basement has taken away the terrors of wash day. The conveniences in the kitchen have greatly lessened the work of feeding to hungry men folks.

The farm reading table is strewn with the latest magazines, and the girl has a piano or at least an organ. A piano dealer in one of the middle-western states recently told me that he sold fifteen pianos to the farmers in one township last year. If the farmer's daughter wants a piano he is going to get it for her. He may have to raise a few more hogs next year to pay for it, but that is easily done.

Taking everything together, any comparisons that the country girl may be able to draw are favorable to the farm. She has been raised in the open air. The pigs and the calves and the chickens are her playmates. The colts will come when she whistles, for who ever heard of a country girl who couldn't whistle? She can name all the trees in the wood lot, and she knows the note of every bird that sings in their branches. Every day is full of sunshine, and she sings for the very joy of living where air is free and room is not bought and sold.

She still longs for a career, but it is a career of a different sort. She wants to live the rest of her life on the farm, and she looks forward to the day when she will go into partnership with some ambitious, resourceful young farmer. To be a successful wife, to help make the most out of the old farm and to do her part to make her community the most progressive in the country—this is the career that appeals to the modern country girl. Schools have been provided to teach her the things she needs to know about her coming business. If she is in one of the most up-to-date communities, she begins to learn sewing and cooking in the rural school. If not given there, it comes in the high school or the preparatory school or the small college. All of these institutions are providing courses in domestic science. They do not dispute the fact that love is the basis of a successful marriage, but they realize that a good digestion is the basis of a loving disposition.

In awakening the community to the realization of its own duties and its possibilities the influence of the farmer's wife is even greater than that of the farmer himself. It is the women on whom the social life of the country communities must largely depend. The problem of rural life is largely a social one now that conditions have solved the financial problem.
