WORLD HERALD DAILY WAR STORY PROVING A BIG HIT

A bit of newspaper enterprise that is making an impression in Nebraska and Iowa is the printing of the history of the civil war in the World-Herald of Omaha. This history is printed in a very interesting way in a column headed "Fifty Years Ago Today" Each day an article is printed giving a brief and accurate account of the exactly fifty years ago on that day. The World-Herald, Chicago News, Boston Globe and New York Times are among the metropolitan newspapers that are pushing this enterprise. The World-Herald has secured in addition to the daily history, a series of articles descriptive of the great battles, and contributions by the great generals and leaders of the civil war, which articles are printed on Sunday, with wartime photographs.

On this Semi-Centennial year of the civil war, the World-Herald enterprise is a particularly strong and appropriate feature. It recommends itself not only to the old veterans, but to the younger generation and to the schools, where close familiarity with this great period of our history is all too rare. 19-1f-696

YEOMEN MEET

For the past three weeks Assistant State Manager C. E. Matteson has been taking applications here for Yeomen Insurance and as a result of this campaign a class of thirty members was adopted by the Homestead at the K. C. hall Thursday night. State Manager W. J. Tiley from North Platte put on the work assisted by his wife and Dist. Deputy Chas. A. Hamrick from Hemingford, and the exemplification of the work was said by many old members to be the best they ever witnessed.

This makes a total membership of 47 and the Homestead chose up sides and appointed two captains, Prof. G. M. Burns and Mrs. Lulu Witham, and will enter a membership contest, the losing side to banquet the winners. The assistant state manager and district deputy and local deputies, Mrs. Lilly White, Mrs. Lulu Cowan, and O. E. Phillips, will assist the Homestead in this energetic campaign.

The following officers were elected and installed:
Foreman, Philip Noh; Master of Ceremonies, Ora E. Phillips; Correspondent, Mrs. Cora Lewis; Master of Accounts, Russell Rodgers; Chaplain, Miss Susan Frazier.

On July 22, the people of Texas will vote on the question of a Prohibition Amendment to their Constitution.

Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, of Los Angeles, California, has been appointed on the police force of that city.

The Prussian Statistical Year Book for 1909 says that 1,154 persons died of Delirium Tremens during 1908. 57 were between fifteen and thirty years of age, 932 were between thirty and sixty, 131 were between sixty and seventy, and 34 were over seventy.

A liquor firm of Ogden, Utah, is sending out circular letters, through the dry districts of surrounding state inscribed with the statement, "Uncle Sam is our partner." This cannot be denied so long as the government accepts a share of their "blood-money," nor so long as there exists the present federal regulations concerning the inter-state shipment of liquors.

On Jan. 23, Judge Landis of the United States District Court at Chicago, imposed penitentiary sentences of from fifteen months to two and one-half years, and fines amounting to $51,500, upon thirteen liquor dealers who had violated the Internal Revenue law. Six of them were given both the fine and imprisonment. With but possibly one exception these men were all foreigners. They attempted to settle the case by payment of $30,000, but Judge Landis said that might be considered good business but could not be done in his district.

The Emporia, Kansas Gazette says, "The drinking of beer and whiskey is a habit which is abandoned easily enough when the opportunity for drinking is removed. There are no saloons in Emporia and so there is little drinking. Scores of men who would drink more or less if there were open saloons, go about their business day after day, and year after year, and never think of beer or whiskey. This is one of the great results of prohibition. It removes the opportunity and temptation, and legends of people who would waste a certain amount of money if the saloons were open, use that money in sensible ways to increase the comfort of their families or to acquire property, and the general prosperity is thus enhanced.

People who live in communities where there are open saloons do not realize how easy it is to get along without beer or booze. The man who takes a certain number of drinks every day knows it is doing him no good but he is in the habit of dropping into Charlie's place on the way home and taking a few snifters for sociability's sake, and so long as the swinging doors of that family resort are working he finds the habit hard to break away from. When Charlie's place is closed he is surprised to find how easy it is to trot along home without the snifters."

Governor Fernald of Maine said: "There are more than 212,000 school children in the state of Maine. Not one of this great army of healthy happy, rugged boys and girls has ever seen emblazoned over a store front a sign advertising the sale of intoxicating liquors. They have walked the hundreds of miles of business streets of our twenty cities and 454 towns on their way to and from school; they have seen the names of their fathers shining in letters of gold as sellers of all the wholesome and necessary articles of trade, as lawyers and doctors and printers, but never as poisoners of the human system and wreckers of homes. This is the legacy that has come to the 212,000 children from the 200,000 school children of the generation that preceded them. I hope these 212,000 children will pledge themselves to bequeath to the 225,000 school children who without doubt will follow them, the same precious legacy."

John Burke, Governor of North Dakota, says: "The big farmer will tell you that when saloons were licensed and a wet day came, his employees, perhaps right in the very busy season, went to town and got drunk and the farmer suffered a great loss waiting for them to sober up, and that the banishment of the saloon has taken from the employe the opportunity to get drunk and a great many laborers come in during the harvest season, when a day means a great deal to the farmer and hence the farmer has become a prohibitionist. The merchant finds that with the banishment of the saloon the people generally have more money to spend in the legitimate channels of trade and that in consequence the collections are better, and the people are better housed, better clothed, better fed and better schooled on account of prohibition; and so the business man becomes a prohibitionist because it puts money into his pocket and at the same time it improves the moral condition of the community."

Governor Kitchen of North Carolina says: "Prohibition has now been in force throughout the state for two years. This is a short period with which to measure the effects of a reform movement. We have done little more than planted the seed, whose full fruition will be gathered by coming generations. And yet already the results fully justify its adoption. There has been, as appears from the Attorney General's report, based upon Superior Court crime, even in the crime of violating the prohibition law. Business statistics, a marked diminution in experienced increase rather than diminished prosperity. Morality, industry and frugality have increased and politics and government have been to a great extent relieved of one of their most corrupting influences."
