John Weers of Auburn Drops Gun and Both Charges Strike Him in Back.

Auburn, Neb., May 16.—John Weers, a farmer residing twelve miles southwest of here, accidentally shot and killed himself. The sprinkle of rain caused rats in the corn crib to flock out to get water. Mr. Weers got his shotgun and started to the crib with a view of shooting rats. It is supposed that the gate swung to and struck the gun and knocked it out of his hands. As the gun fell it struck in such a way as to discharge both barrels, the loads of shot striking him in the small of the back, killing him instantly. Mr. Weers was about thirty-eight years old and leaves a widow and several children.

MADERO TO REBELS OIL KNOCKED OUT

Puts Down Rebellion Among Insurrecto Force at Juarez.

NAVARRO FLEES TO EL PASO.

Threats Against His Life Made Federal General Hasten to American Soil—in a Motor Car Madero Assists the Prisoner to Escape.

Juarez, Mex., May 15.—Peace negotiations, unofficial, but auspicious, have been resumed between the federal government and the insurrectos and the prospects are that a definite understanding would be reached within twenty-four hours.

Juarez, Mex., May 15.—The supreme test, the clash between the military and political authorities, was experienced by the provisional government of Mexico and Francisco I. Madero, Jr., the provisional president, is complete master of the situation.

After a series of thrilling incidents, during which the lives of Madero and his chiefs were in danger, General Pascual Orozco in a moment of passion ordered the arrest of the little rebel leader and demanded the resignation of the provisional cabinet, the capital of the provisional government is quiet. General Navarro, the defeated federal commander, whose life was threatened by angry mobs of insurrectos, was spirited away by Madero, himself, to the American side of the Rio Grande and today is at the home of friends in El Paso.

A Plot to Foster Anarchy.

A plot, quiet, deeply laid, is suspected by the rebel leaders as the cause of the near riot in front of the Madero headquarters and some of the Maderists believe it was a scheme on the part of those who are trying to break up the organization of the revolution to foster the opinion throughout Mexico that the movement is one of anarchy. Madero in a statement charged that General Orozco's actions were incited "by persons interested in bringing about disunion among us."

General Orozco called on Provisional President Madero and the two men talked alone for some time. Suddenly their voices were raised and the other political chiefs rushed into the room only to find themselves held back by some of Orozco's men. A throng of soldiers had gathered outside the building and Senor Madero determined to appeal to them. Revolvers had been drawn and rifles were seized, but Madero stood bravely before the crowd and slapping his breast, shouted, "Shoot me, shoot me, if you dare."

Madero Won Them Over.

General Orozco was at his side. His men ostensibly had been summoned to take part in the coup d'etat, but as Madero stepped forth among them and talked in his calm, reassuring way, the affection which has been ripening among his men since the revolution crystallized in a mighty shout, "Viva Madero."

There are all sorts of stories in regard to the clash, but at the bottom it was apparent that dissension among the military chiefs was the basic cause of the disturbance. Colonel Villa was said to have insisted on General Navarro's life, while General Orozco also was said to have been displeased with the naming of a civilian as minister of war. Today all is harmony, Madero has impressed upon Orozco that the choosing of a cabinet and the management of a government is quite outside the function of the military.

Apprehension for the safety of General Navarro stirred the sympathy of General Madero after the incident at the municipal building and he was determined at the risk of his own life, to save the federal commander. He rode quickly in a motor car to where General Navarro has been staying since he was captured and after a brief explanation conveyed General Navarro to the river front, where Navarro waded the river and soon was safe on the American territory. American troops were ready to protect him if necessary, but the insurrectos were completely ignorant of Madero's move till it was accomplished.

Supreme Court Holds Standard Is a Conspiracy.

ITS DISSOLUTION IS ORDERED.

Time Is Extended From One Month to Six Months—Opinion Is Read by Chief Justice White—Two Points in Decision.

Washington, May 15.—The government won its case in the supreme court of the United States against the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, in that it is a conspiracy and monopoly in restraint of trade. The decree of the lower court was affirmed, being modified in particulars which Chief Justice White said were slight.

Justice Harlan announced a dissenting opinion.

The decree of the lower court was modified so that there need not be "an absolute cessation of interstate commerce in petroleum and its products by such vast agencies as are embraced in the combination, a result which might arise from that portion of the decree which enjoined carrying on of interstate commerce not only by the New Jersey corporation, but by all of the subsidiary companies until the dissolution of the combination of stocks in accordance with the decree."

The court also extended the time from one to six months in which the dissolution must take place.

White Reads Decision.

The decision, which contains about 25,000 words, was read by Chief Justice White. It was Chief Justice White who had lent his voice to the refusal of the court to dissolve the so-called sugar trust when the famous Knight case was before the court. He also delivered a dissenting opinion when the Northern Securities company was dissolved by the court as being in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

On the Knight case the Standard Oil depended largely for support; on the majority opinion in the Northern Securities case the government had founded much of its hope. It was evident that Attorney General Wickersham, who had directed the government's battle during its latter stages, was not delighted when the chief justice began, but he maintained some hope of success.

Chief Justice White first went into an extensive recital of the facts in the case and then held that the court had jurisdiction over the suit, which had been questioned by the Standard Oil.

Jungle of Law and Testimony.

Chief Justice White said that the contentions were as divergent as the ends of the earth. He spoke of a "jungle" of testimony and of law. The only point in which the two sides were in accord was that the first and second sections of the Sherman anti-trust law controlled the case. The chief justice said the court seized on this point as a basis on which to work out a decision.

Taking up the two sections, the chief justice began consideration of the law, promising to come later to its application to the present case. He first took up the common law, which dealt with the problems raised by the Sherman anti-trust law.

By the reorganization of the Standard Oil of New Jersey, the chief justice said that there was prima facie evidence that there was an endeavor to control and monopolize; that further investigation made this conclusive presumption of an intent to restrain trade. He said only the question of remedy remained for consideration.

Law and Reason.

Probably the most important decision of law laid down in the opinion was that the words in the statute "every restraint of trade" are not to be literally construed, but are to be construed in the light of reason.

On this point the court held that the position of the government that the supreme court had decided that any qualification of this phrase was precluded by previous decisions of the supreme court was erroneous.

Decision of Lower Court Affirmed.

Chief Justice White said the court found no cause to doubt the conclusion of the court below, namely:

"That the acts and dealings established by the proof operated to destroy the 'potentiality of competition,' which otherwise would have existed."
