STOCKMEN'S CON-

Last Friday The Herald sent out notices to business men that special editions of 2,000 copies each would be printed this week and next, giving us 500 copies each week for distribution among visitors and other interested parties. As most of the special advertising wanted by Alliance business men, that is advertising that they will want on account of the special issue, will not be inserted until next week, we have decided to print only 1,700 copies this week, which will be sufficient to meet the demand for extra copies, we think, but will print the full 2,000 copies next week. This week's issue consists of two sections, 12 pages. Next week's will be in two sections, 16 pages.

Persons who want advertising in The Herald next week will favor us by ordering the same as early as possible. It takes a lot of hard work to be as enterprising as we wish to be in the publication of this paper, but the work can be considerably lessened by promptness on the part of advertisers and those who furnish news for publication.
