N. P. V. TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION MEETS

A Rich Three-Days Program Provided for Annual Meeting of N. P. V. Teachers' Association

BOX BUTTE COUNTY INCLUDED

The annual meeting of the North Platte Valley Teachers' Association, including Box Butte county, will be held at Bridgeport, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. March 27th, 28th and 29th. A splendid program has been provided and his promises to be one of the most interesting and instructive of any of the conventions yet held. Among the names prominent on the program are those of President D. W. Hayes of the Peru State Normal and Superintendent Earl M. Cline of the Geneva city schools.

President D. W. Hayes, D. W. Hayes, A. M., president of Peru State Normal, is one of the eminently successful school men of Nebraska. The Peru president, who is a cultured and scholarly man, knows the conditions in western Nebraska schools and the needs of western Nebraska people. He was engaged in school work in Alliance eight years, four years as principal of the High school and four years as superintendent of city schools. During the last few years that he was here he was, also, president of the Alliance State Junior Normal, and had a large acquaintance among the teachers of this part of Nebraska. In addition to having a splendid scholastic training, and a rich teaching experience, Mr. Hayes is a popular and successful educational lecturer. He has been well received at numerous county and district associations and at the National Educational association.

Superintendent Earl M. Cline, Saturday, March 29th, Supt. Earl M. Cline of Geneva will address the association. Mr. Cline, although a young man in the profession, has an enviable record. He is best known through his connection with the Sidney schools; he was principal of Sidney High school for several years and was unusually successful. Since leaving Sidney, he has taken a course in law at the state university, and last summer was elected superintendent of the Geneva schools. This successful young educator is well known to western Nebraska teachers as a splendid student of history and as an unusually forceful and entertaining speaker.

TOKEN OF ADMIRATION

By JULIA CONWAY.

It had always been the rule in the Crompton family for the children to share and share alike, but when pretty Claribel, the eldest, received the day after her sixteenth birthday a beautiful basket of bonbons, a token of the admiration of a youth whom she had met while visiting in the summer, she inwardly rebelled at the prospect of seeing the delicious sweets melt away like the dew before the sun. For the young Cromptons always made remarkably short work of a box of candy.

"I speak first for that big piece of candied pineapple," said Alice as the children gathered around Claribel to see the delectable package opened.

"Can I have some of them candied violets, Claribel?" asked small Joe.

"No, you can't," Claribel quickly raised the basket beyond the reach of Joe's nose too clean hand. "You can't have any, because you said, 'them' instead of 'those.'"

"Well, I don't care if I did. You ate more'n half the taffy I bought with the nickel dad gave me for having my spelling paper right."

"And it was the first time he ever got a perfect mark," chimed Helen.

"Why, Claribel, aren't you going to let us have any of the candy? You shut down the basket lid with a regular forever bang."

"Mayn't I have that pineapple to put in my lunch box?" asked Alice. "I guess if you had to take an old lunch to school every day the way I do, you'd—"

"No, Alice," returned Claribel with dignity. "I'm going to save this candy."

"Save it!" exclaimed all the children.

"What for?" demanded Carita.

"You know I had the toothache yesterday and couldn't eat any of your birthday candy. I think I ought to have a lot of this."

"And get the toothache again," scornfully remarked Claribel. "If you weren't such a baby about going to the dentist you could have your teeth fixed."

"Well, what good would it do if you're always going to save your candy?"

"I'm not always going to save it," replied Claribel in a tone of martyred patience, "but this is a very special basket of candy and I think if I don't want it all gobbled up the first minute I've a right to keep it. My sorority is going to meet here a week from next Saturday and I want to show all the girls this beautiful basket just as it is. Then I'll pass it around and you can all have some."

"Yes, after the sorority girls have picked it all over," grumbled Alice.

"Some day you may wish to join my sorority, Alice."

Alice, being an aspirant for early election to her sister's sorority, looked somewhat chagrined and mentioned casually that it was time to be going to school. After the others were gone Claribel hastily looked about for a hiding place for her basket of candy.

After a moment's desperate thought—for nothing was sacred in the house of Crompton—she flew into the library and secreted the candy with considerable satisfaction at her bright idea.

"Where on earth did you put your candy?" asked Helen the next day.

"Oh, were you looking for it?"

"No, of course not, but I didn't see it anywhere and I just wondered where it was."

"I suppose you all wondered." Claribel was smiling superior. "I just put it away."

Joe, coming in from play on the Saturday of the sorority meeting, forced his way into the library against the advice of his young sisters, who warned him that Claribel would be angry if he went into the meeting, which was always very secret.

"I don't care if it is a secret," declared Joe. "Claribel promised me some candied violets today and I want 'em."

"Joe, run right away," commanded Claribel as he entered the room. "You know you can't come to our meeting."

"I don't want to come to your meeting. All I want is the candy you said I could—"

"Oh, my basket of candy!" fairly shrieked Claribel. "It's all burned up."

"Why, how can it be?" asked Alice, who had rushed in, having been listening at the door. "Where was it?"

Claribel pointed at the fireplace. "I put it under the cedar boughs father brought in from the country to make the fireplace look pretty, and when the girls came today I thought how cheerful the fire would be and I lighted it and forgot all about the candy!"

All her sisters, sorority and real, gathered sympathetically about the weeping Claribel, but Joe said, "I guess now you're sorry you didn't give them your candied violets."

Items About the Boys Who Do the Boosting for Their Towns and Surrounding Country

A FEW FRATERNAL MENTIONS

Editor Lyman of the Minatare Free Press kicks because Jim Hill's railroad carried his readyprint up to Guernsey and back last week and then charged two cents more freight than had been previously charged on the same weight. He consoles himself, however, by saying, "Jim may have needed the money." Bro. Lyman better look a little out. He may not get his ready-print at all next time.

The young son of Editor Mayes of the Rushville Standard has been seriously ill, an operation being necessary. All of the other newspapers in this part of Nebraska will join The Herald in hoping for the lad's speedy recovery.

Editor Johansen of the Hay Springs Enterprise finds it necessary to issue a supplement to his paper in order to accommodate advertisers and for additional news.

The Hyannis Tribune pulled off quite a stunt last week by getting a special wire from Washington, ahead of any other paper in the state, giving the full text of an order by President Taft, issued March 3, opening the North Platte forest reserve to settlement. The opening will take place about the 1st of October. Publication will be made in all papers when the details of the opening are worked out. In the meantime, congratulations to the Tribune and Editor Bassett.—Thomas County Herald, March 21.

H. A. Mark has sold his paper, The Hammer, which he published at Gering in the interest of irrigation in the North Platte valley. It was disposed of to O. E. Farnham of Newell, S. D., who will consolidate it with the Water Users' Bulletin, of which he is publisher.

We believe it would help readers of the two Alliance papers to appreciate them better if they would compare either of them with newspapers in other towns of about the same size. Any one wishing to make the comparison can do so by calling at The Herald office and taking a look at a copy of a paper published in another western Nebraska town which, according to the census report, had a larger population than Alliance.

The Marsland Tribune of last Friday clips a part of The Herald's story of the big blizzard and credits it to "the Alliance papers". Does this mean that the Tribune editor considers this the only paper in Alliance or does he wish to divide the credit?

Mrs. Marie O'Donnell Weekes, editor of the Norfolk, Nebr., Press, is a candidate for appointment as postmaster of that city. We don't know anything about the claims of the other candidates, but we know something about Mrs. Weekes' paper and the good work she has done in the interest of progressive democracy, and we wish to say here that, if The Herald had a vote in the selection of postmaster at Norfolk, it would be for her.

One of the most conspicuous improvements recently made in the newspapers of northwestern Nebraska is that of the Hooker County Tribune, published at Mullen by J. H. Welch. It is neatly printed and contains a considerable amount of news and advertising. Persons who think that an up-to-date, newsy newspaper cannot come out of the sand hills will change their minds if they come across a copy of Editor Welch's paper.

A FREAK OF THE STORM

Prof. E. W. Hunt, Well Known in Alliance, Had Peculiar Experience in Omaha Cyclone

WIND PUT HAT ON HIS HEAD

Prof. E. W. Hunt, associate editor of the Twentieth Century Farmer, is well known in Alliance and northwestern Nebraska. The following from the Tuesday's Bee will be read with interest by Herald readers, especially the many of them who are acquainted with the professor: "The biggest freak story yet told of the storm's caprices was the experience of Prof. E. W. Hunt, 3329 Cuming street, who, after the storm was over, found himself wearing a hat that was hanging in the closet before the house was blown over. When he arrived home shortly before the terrific wind began to blow he placed the hat and coat he had been wearing upon a chair and then went downstairs to tell the family of Mrs. Cora Curtis that a cyclone was coming and to get into the basement. They preceded him down and just as he was in the hallway of the first floor the second story was blown off and when he came to from the shock he found his hair full of mortar from the brick walls and a tan hat that had been hanging in the closet of his room on his head. The house was ruined. The family members were all bruised, but escaped serious injury."

COPIES OF INDUSTRIAL EDITION WANTED

The Herald office wishes to purchase a number of copies of the Industrial Edition issued on March 6th. Our supply is exhausted and we have orders for more. The regular sale price of five cents per copy will be paid at this office for any number up to one hundred copies.
