WALT MASON.

This blooming month deserves all praise, and should inspire some poet song; it ought to have two hundred days, and each a fortnight long. In May the winter chill is gone, and there's not heat enough to hurt, and we can play upon the lawn, or manufacture pies of dirt. The garden sass we love is cheap, and we may have a full repast; the nights are cool, and we can sleep as slept Old Masters in the past. In May the flies are far between, and one can slumber in his bed, on Sunday morn, without a screen in which to hide his weary head. The chiggers and the bugs and bees are not yet organized for strife, and one may sit beneath the trees, and there enjoy a peaceful life. May is the resting place betwixt the winter stress and summer strain; it keeps the two from getting mixed, and shields us from all kinds of pain. And now the girls are bending o'er their needles, morning, night and noon, and buying glad rags at the store, which they will wear as brides in June. And every one feels young and gay, existence is a cheerful thing; and he's a dead one who in May declines to smile and dance and sing.

WALT MASON.

To try to measure the enjoyment of others by your own.

To expect uniformity of opinions in this world.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

To endeavor to mould all dispositions alike.

To not yield in unimportant trifles.

To look for perfection in your own actions.

To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.

Not to help everybody, wherever, however and whenever you can.

To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

Not to make allowances for the weaknesses of others.

To estimate people by some outside quality for it is that within that makes the man.

Judge Thomas C. T. Train of the New York court of general sessions gives "thirteen rules of life" to offset the "thirteen mistakes of life" enumerated by Judge Rentoul of the London court. Here they are:

Keep your head at all times.

Trust yourself above everyone else.

Do not deal in lies.

Do not give way to hating, even though you are hated.

Do not look too good.

Do not talk too wise.

Talk with the crowds, but keep your virtue.

Walk with kings if you will, but do not lose sight of the common people.

Live every day so that neither your foes nor your friends can hurt you.

Let all men count with you, but none too much.

Make allowances for all doubts.

Fill every minute with sixty seconds of work.

Be a man.

Bad roads cost the American people millions of dollars annually. The average cost of carting one ton over one mile of American road is 24 cents, as against 12 cents and less per ton mile in Europe.

A Kansas man was so well pleased with his experience on Go-to-Church Sunday that he declared he could scarcely wait for a return date in February, 1915.

Some men are always preaching economy and expecting their wives to do the practicing.

Something About Government Ownership

No. 4

It was an epoch in the world's history when the Bell System opened a long distance line between New York and Chicago, in 1893, and demonstrated that speech could be transmitted 1,000 miles.

Today the business man in Denver sends his voice clear and distinct into the office of the New York merchant, 2,000 miles distant.

A small army of skilled telephone workmen in the Rockies are now building the home stretch of the great Bell route from New York to San Francisco, and transcontinental conversations over the Bell System will be one of the wonders ushered in by the Panama-Pacific Exposition next spring.

Last year the first 900-mile telephone line was built in Europe, where practically all telephone systems are government owned, two decades after a thousand-mile line had been in successful operation in the United States.
