Lawbreaker Tried to Throw Police Chief into Mud, but Failed to Succeed

Chief of Police Jeffers is rapidly acquiring a reputation as a heavy-weight, and local friends may soon match him with Willard for a bout. A short time ago the chief went up against three combatants and came out victorious, the three trying to manage the light plant when the trouble started.

Thursday he found another would-be prize fighter, Paul Urban, who had made himself generally obnoxious by insulting women on the street, and who had had his hair cut at a barber shop and had then refused to pay for it, besides committing other offenses. Chief Jeffers was called to the barber shop and arrested Urban, who accompanied him peaceably until they had nearly reached the station, when the prisoner asked where they were going, to which the chief replied, "To the jail." Whereupon Urban objected and informed the officer he would throw him into the mud. A lively mixup ensued, in which Jeffers was kept busy defending himself, until he backed the prisoner against a billboard and gave him one of the "Jeffers Special" left handed uppercuts, which so tamed him that he lay down on the sidewalk for a short rest. He was then removed to the jail without trouble, where he was fined $25 and costs. He had $5.40 on his person, and this was applied in part payment of the fine. The city will be paid the remainder in work.

It is not known where Urban hails from, but he is a blacksmith and had been working at odd jobs in this vicinity for several days. On Thursday he came to town with the intention of getting some medicine, which it seemed consisted of "joy water", and he remembers little that happened after his arrival in town until he found himself locked up in the Hotel de Jeffers. The chief stated that Urban was "some man" with his fists, and that for a while he thought the prisoner would carry out his threat and throw him into the mud.

A NOVEL CONTEST

Winner Will Be Awarded One Day's Free Use of Auto With Private Chauffeur

Ward B. Norton, the man who sells Buick and Chalmers automobiles, has inaugurated a rather unique contest in connection with his business. The prize is one full day's free use of a Buick auto, together with a driver, and this will be given to the person who writes the best 100-word answer to the question, "What would I do if I had an automobile for a day?"

The contest is open to everyone in Box Butte and surrounding counties, and no one is barred except those connected with the Norton salesrooms, and newspaper men who have been appointed as judges. It is not literary ability that will count in the decision of the judges, but the plain statement of facts, and everyone stands just as much chance as his neighbor. The only technical condition is that the story shall not contain more than one hundred words.

Answers should be addressed to "Contest Manager, care Ward W. Norton", and these answers will be filed away unopened until May 1, the last day of the contest, when they will be opened by the judges and the successful contestant named. The free day's ride will be given the first fair day after the contest closes. Such a contest as this is new here, and will no doubt cause considerable interest. The people who have no machine, but wish for one, will now have a chance on the opportunity of literally owning a car for a day, and in addition will have a private chauffeur. The contest is open now.

Threw Way Bills into Fire

A serious, and at the same time amusing, incident occurred on the banana train which passed through here Monday. Just before the train reached the yards, Conductor Charley Rider handed the way bills to Jack Johnson, a brakeman, with instructions to throw them off at the yard office so it would not be necessary to take them back. Johnson walked forward to the engine on which Fred Reeder, another brakeman, was standing, and, standing on the engine tank, shouted to Reeder to "catch them". At that he threw them, but Reeder failed to make the "catch", and the result was that the bundle went straight into the open fire box.

The incident caused no unnecessary delay, the train proceeding on its slip, but it was necessary to wire the records from Kansas City to Billings. Hereafter when Johnson tries to make such a throw, he thinks he will tie a barrel to the bundle so there will be no danger of it going into the fire box.

HOMESTEAD CASE SETTLED

Has Been in Litigation Several Years—Entryman Died Before Making Final Proof

The case of the homestead protest which names James McGuirk, Coote C. Mulloy, Francis C. Mulloy and James E. Rice has been settled, and the land is now in possession of Rice. This case has been in litigation for several years. It seems that McGuirk made homestead entry on July 31, 1897. He died January 27, 1910, leaving the homestead to Coote C. Mulloy. Final proof was submitted by Coote C. Mulloy May 5, 1911, but the certificate was withheld, proceedings being instituted upon a report of a special agent, the charges being that the defendant had not maintained his residence on the homestead according to law; that he had not improved and cultivated it; that he did not make entry for his own use and benefit, but for the use of Coote C. Mulloy, the devisee, and that Coote C. Mulloy had entered into a contract to sell the land prior to his submission of proof thereon.

Mulloy died before the date fixed for the hearing, and the homestead was left to his heir, Francis C. Mulloy, and James E. Rice, transferee, and the hearing was held on July 21, 1914. The government submitted its testimony, but the defense offered none. The claimant in the case made final proof, and as it appeared that all fines and commissions had been paid on May 5, 1911, and proceedings not having been instituted until February 11, 1914, which was not within two years from the date of the issuance of the receipt, the entry was held confirmed, and James E. Rice is now owner of the land. The defense was represented by Boyd & Metz.

Over 90 per cent of Business Men Fail

Men fail in business because they do not know the game. They lack system and a thorough knowledge of their business. The reason why so many would-be farmers fail is because they know little or nothing of the science of farming. They think anybody can farm and then are surprised to find that their crops will not grow. The farmer who is always behind, who always has bad luck with his crops, is the man who farms by guess and trusts to luck. If he were in the mercantile business he would be in the hands of a receiver within a year. He is a failure but he hangs on because the poorest farmer can get a living out of the land if he only plows and sows the seed.

An Agricultural Education

The first thing a young man who intends to go into business should do is to take a course in a business college. Here he can become familiar with the first principles of business, without which he will fail. The first thing a man who expects to farm should do is to take a course in an agricultural college, if he can, but if he has not the time or the money to spend in a two-year course, he can get the same instruction at home by taking a course in the Campbell Correspondence School of Soil Culture. Everything is furnished—books and all—at a very slight cost, and the best thing about it, he does not have to leave the farm or his work.

He can choose from the following courses:

Soil Improvement Course	Cereal Culture Course
Horticultural Course	Dry Farming Course
Small Farming Course	Farm Engineering Course
	Soil Tillage Course

Summer is the time to study agriculture, and the farm and garden is the laboratory in which to work out the problems. Don't wait for fall or winter to begin, but get busy now. You will learn more in one summer applying your instruction in the fields than in a dozen winters sitting by the fire.

Send for our catalog Number 3. It will not cost you a cent.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't stay gray! Here's a simple recipe that anybody can apply with a hair brush.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get this famous oil-recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair. Well-known downtown druggist as "Weyth's" darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge with soft brush with it and draw the through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant.
