Many, many good, honest men have worked hard and piled up a little fortune, and then all at once LOST all they had by just ONE foolish investment.

The following appeared in the papers recently about a prominent man who died:

... Despite his marvelous career in and around Chicago which caused him at one time to be rated as a millionaire, he died a BANKRUPT. Most of his great fortune melted in disastrous speculations. ...

A spider can live ten months without food, but who wants to be a spider?

Over at Bayard they have a man named Sixberry. In other words, just about a box full.

One of the easiest jobs we know of is to detect flattery when it is applied to your enemy.

After they have tried all the other palices, some men have decided that honesty is the best one.

Of course experience costs money, but now and then you find a man who profits on the investment.

Some girls seem to think that they can attract attention on the street by exceeding the speed limit in chewing gum.

If philanthropists were rated by the amount of advice they give, this old world would be running over with them.

Generally the men who are always talking about working themselves to death are not the ones who keep the undertaker busiest.

Since the disaster overtook the Eastland in the Chicago river, I am more than ever contented to ride on "Bedelia" at Broncho Lake.

The cause of so many family rows in some homes is that father is not certain who is boss and wants to fight every twenty-four hours to retain the belt.

Typewriter manufacturers over the United States have now gone into the ammunition game, and it is reported that a number of hens are about to enter the shell game.

You think you are smart, but can you tell without looking up the date, the date of President McKinley's assassination? This question caused quite an argument on the streets the other day.

An Alliance man got off a bit of wisdom the other day when he said that it took horse sense to run an automobile, but I am of the opinion that some drivers in Alliance do not even possess this requisite.

The size limit of parcel post packages has now been increased from seventy-two to eighty-four inches. It will be just a short time until you can ship washing machines, automobiles, and other smaller articles by mail.

A man in New Jersey got a seven-years' prison sentence for stealing $120 from his girl-Rosie's stocking. And, strange to say, Rosie was in the stocking when he got it. Now Rosie's singing, "If the wind had only blown the other way."

It is, of course, pleasant reading to be informed that Thomas A. Edison, Henry Ford and Orville Wright have been named as the naval advisory board, but at the same time, Alliance people would feel safer if they knew that W. J. Hamilton, I. U. Hager, Cy Laine, Cal Cox, Billie King and I. E. Tash were on this board.

An Oklahoma man has been made the defendant in a damage suit because he wanted to know if a certain lady wore silk stockings, and because he took a very forcible manner of ascertaining. Here in Alliance he can classify the stockings clear across the street, and there will be no danger of a damage suit, either.

The finger print system of identification has been in use for some years, but now it appears that it will be replaced by the "toe print" system. Recently a woman thief was caught by this method. The only objection I have to this new system is that it will bring into general use in America those safety devices that are being worn by the European soldiers over their noses to keep the gas fumes out of their systems.

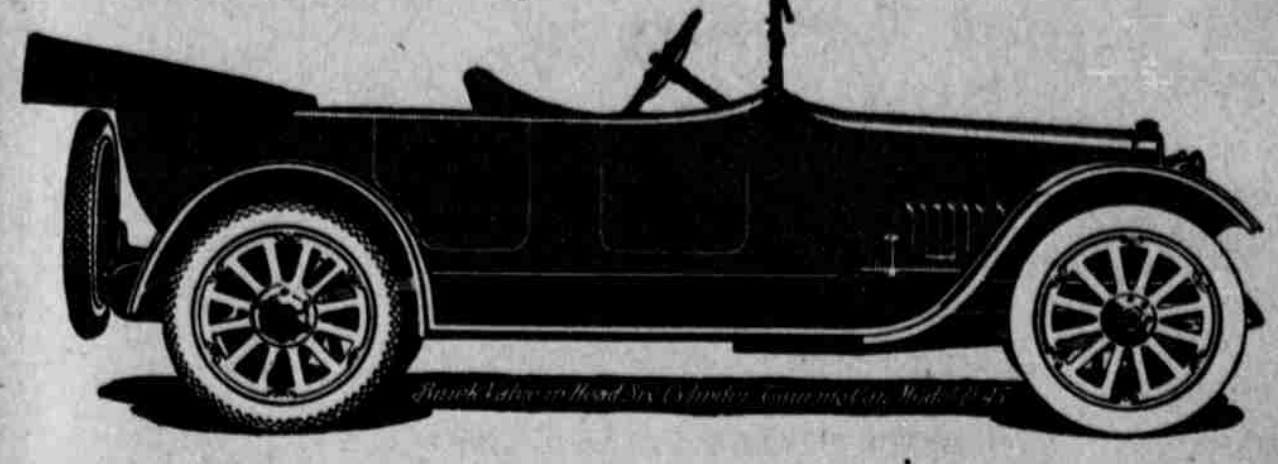

The latest "automobile accessory" is what is known as a refrigerator. The uses of this very important accessory are numerous, but it is designed principally to carry twelve "pint bottles" (we don't know whether it means ketchup or vinegar) and can be attached in a very few minutes. While it is not exactly designed for use on Fords, the manufacturers are urging Ford owners to use their rebates to buy one. One compartment in the refrigerator is for knives and forks and these can be used as tools on Fords, which may make it very popular.

It might have been staged at the theatre, but it actually happened on Box Butte avenue early last evening—six o'clock, if you must know. She was standing on the corner of Third and Box Butte, but wanted to cross the street. She paused, looked up and down Box Butte, and started across. She was attired in a white transparent dress, a white hat and white shoes, and her general appearance was what most men would call "nifty". In the middle of the street she paused—up the street stood a group of men who were watching her. She didn't know whether to continue on across the street or retrace her steps. She decided to continue her journey, and walked with a stride that was almost a trot. On reaching the opposite side of the street she paused, looked at the group of men standing a few feet in front of her and muttered to herself. The expression on her face clearly indicated she was almost angry, but perhaps she wasn't. "God pity the blind," one of the men in the group remarked. She continued her journey down the street on the shady side.

E. B. Grier, assistant general manager of the Burlington, was in the city Tuesday in his private car. He left for the east.
