NEW BURLINGTON ENGINES

New Engines Recently Placed in Service by Burlington Represent Latest Pacific Type

The locomotive used today in through passenger service are required to haul trains which are often as heavy as the freight trains of a comparatively few years ago. These trains are hauled at high speeds, on exacting schedules. Locomotives for such service must not only be of sufficient size to develop the required power; they must also be economical in fuel and water consumption, and must not deliver destructive blows to the tracks and bridges when running at high speeds. An efficient self-propelled power plant is required, and high engineering skill is necessary to produce it.

The new S3 engines just placed in service by the Burlington, represent the latest development of the Pacific type for heavy passenger service. These engines appear to be the embodiment of power and strength and impress one by their wonderful size. Built as high as they can be and negotiate bridges, the parts above the boiler on the outside are made as low as possible to obtain the results needed and remain within the prescribed height to meet bridge requirements. The whistle protrudes from the side of the dome instead of the top on account of the height of the boiler. The stack is squat and broad, and the bell, while of average size, seems smaller because of the massiveness of the boiler.

These engines are of the superheater type, thus providing fuel economy and a greater energy from a lesser amount of steam than does by the older and more common type of engines using the saturated steam system. The boiler pressure, because of the superheater construction, is but 180 pounds of steam, an amount that many of the smaller engines carry. A number of new and late devices for conservation of motive power, greater speed, etc., are seen on these engines.

These monsters are over seventy-five feet long and, ready for service, weigh upward of half a million pounds. A six-foot man, wearing a silk hat, could stand erect at the little end of the boiler and a good-sized barrel could be placed inside of one of the immense cylinders.

These great power units were built by the Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia, to pull the Burlington's crack limiteds. No one knows how fast they will run. But one of them will draw a long heavy train of Pullmans at a sustained speed of sixty miles an hour, without much more concern than a youngster pulls a toy wagon down the street. There is ample reserve power to insure the punctual maintenance of schedules, even under adverse weather conditions.

BRANDS WILL EXPIRE

Over 10,000 Horse and Cattle Brands Have Been Issued Under State Law—All Expire in 1917

(By Herald Correspondent)
Lincoln, Neb., State House, Sept. 29—Over 10,000 horse and cattle brands have been issued from the office of the secretary of state of Nebraska in the years past under the state law, and of this number a large per cent are yet in force. Cherry county has the largest number of brands, with the other western counties following closely. All these brands expire December 31, 1917, after which Secretary of State Pool expects to put in a more complete registration than that in vogue at present.

The automobile department of Secretary of State Pool's office is making a cleanup of the automobile licenses and plates, taking care of the same each day as received. This department has accomplished wonders in the matter of putting the new law in force since April 6, handling close to 70,000 licenses and plates.

State Treasurer G. E. Hall is making a record in the treasurer's office. His order, supported by the decision of the Supreme Court, requiring county treasurers to make monthly remittances of all moneys collected each month for the state, has paid the state's debts and stopped the paying of interest by the state, and is bringing a greater return of interest from the depository funds in the banks. During Treasurer Hall's term of office this will mean a saving to the people of the state of from $60,000 to $75,000. He has already collected $7,000 more interest from the banks for the same period of time than any former treasurer.

W. S. Ridgell, state fire commissioner, has just returned from the Fire Marshals' Convention at Chicago, and while there made a thorough investigation as to the constitutionality of the fire marshals' law in different states in regard to condemning and having removed old and dilapidated buildings and finds that in every instance, in states where cases have been brought before the courts the fire marshals' law has been sustained. Cases have been tried in Ohio, Indiana and North Dakota, and in Ohio a case has gone to the court of appeals and has been sustained by that court. This law is virtually the same in all states where there is a fire marshal law and in the future the fire marshal department of Nebraska will insist on this law being complied with and will go into the courts where necessary. Cases have been filed this week in North Platte and Holdrege and will be pushed as fast as possible.

The office force of the Nebraska Insurance Department have been exceedingly busy mailing out the annual summary of insurance business in Nebraska for the year 1914. This report is much larger this year than any previous year, owing to increased business in this line.

The county commissioners of Johnson county and State Auditor Smith have reached an agreement on the claim of the state against that county on what is known as the old insurance account. Under the old law counties paid for the care of their insane patients at the state hospital, but a few years ago this law was changed and hospital charges are now a state expense. For some reason a few counties failed to pay for maintaining their patients, the state having the largest account against Johnson county, which still owes $10,500. At the conference at Tecumseh between the commissioners and the state auditor, they agreed to remit $2,500 on the account at once and pay the rest as soon as the county is in financial shape to do so.

When Baby Has the Croup

When a mother is awakened from sound sleep to find her child who has gone to bed apparently in the best of health struggling for breath, she is naturally alarmed. Yet if she can keep her presence of mind and give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy every ten minutes until vomiting is produced, quick relief will follow and the child will drop to sleep to awaken in the morning as well as ever. This remedy has been in use for many years with uniform success. Obtainable everywhere.

NOT ENOUGH CHILDREN

ever receive the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition.

For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength; it makes them sturdy and strong. No alcohol. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.
