Well Worth Attending

Resume of Lectures, Business Meetings and Entertainments that Have Been Provided for

Chief Brand Inspector C. L. Talbot will, as usual, in reading his annual report, give an interesting explanatory talk that will, no doubt, contain suggestions valuable to stockmen.

T. W. Tomlinson, Secretary of the American National Live Stock Association, has attended previous conventions of the Nebraska Stock Growers' Association, and his talks have never failed to please and instruct. He is conversant with live stock conditions in the west and middle west, and in selecting his own subject for an address never fails to "hit the nail on the head." He knows what to say and how to say it to be both entertaining and helpful in his talk.

The Department of Animal Husbandry of the University of Nebraska has done a great service for the state, especially we may say during the past few years. We congratulate the officers and members of the N. S. G. A. on their good fortune in having a representative of this department of the University present, in the person of Prof. C. B. Lee.

Last month the Nebraska Stockman gave its readers an article on the work of the State Live Stock Sanitary Board and a picture of its efficient president, J. H. Bulla, of South Omaha. Mr. Bulla will address the convention on Wednesday afternoon. One advantage to stockmen that hearing him will have over reading a printed article will be in having the privilege of asking questions and having them answered without delay.

We are saying so much in this issue regarding live stock exchanges and their work that we deem it not necessary to say much concerning them, or any one of them, in giving a resume of the convention program, but we want all of our readers to hear A. F. Stryker, secretary of the South Omaha Live Stock Exchange, in his address on the "Relationship of the Commission Merchant and the Exchange to the Shipper," Wednesday afternoon.

All of the meetings of the convention at which lectures will be delivered will be open to the public, but the one that will probably be of most interest to persons not engaged in the live stock business will be the illustrated lecture on "The Prehistoric Animals of the Nebraska Plains," by Prof. A. C. Whitford of New York. The opera house should be filled Tuesday night.

Not often are Nebraska stockmen privileged to hear an address on a vital subject by a representative of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture, but they have the opportunity at this time. Dr. Hadleigh Marsh of Washington, D. C., representative of that department will give an address on Wednesday afternoon on "Blackleg and Infectious Abortion."

Perhaps no other man has, within the last year or two, stirred up the subject of marketing live stock as has Edward L. Burke of Omaha, vice-chairman of the market committee of the National Live Stock Association. One good thing that may be said in advance for his address is that it will create discussion, if it operates as has previous addresses made on the same subject by him; and discussion leads to investigation and that to education.

After having mentioned those from abroad who will participate in the program of the convention, it would be an inexcusable omission to

To Be the Best Ever

An Excellent Program Prepared, Every Feature of Which Will Interest and Entertain Stockmen

Maybe the number of people who will be in Alliance during the time of the annual convention of the Nebraska Stock Growers' Association will not be as large as in other years, and maybe it will; but from the viewpoint of the practical ranchman, farmer or shipper who is interested in the live stock industry, it looks now as the convention this year will be the best of all up to date.

The usual program of contests and races has been abandoned, or rather postponed to July 4th, and for that reason it may be that some who have been accustomed to come to Alliance at the time of the convention of the N. S. G. A., more on account of the sports than because of the business for which the annual meetings are held, may be absent this year; but because of the excellent program that has been provided to interest and entertain stockmen, it seems probable now that the number of persons engaged in the live stock industry who will be here will be larger than ever before.

The attendance ought to be large. Men of state and national reputation will participate in the deliberations of the convention and address the meetings. Read the program in the adjoining column. As you will see, it will certainly be both interesting and instructive, a program worth while and one worth coming many miles to hear.

It is difficult to sufficiently emphasize the importance of this convention. Every Nebraska stockman who can do so should attend. It is seldom that stockmen have an opportunity to hear in so short a time addresses from men who are so prominent and acknowledged authorities on the subjects which they will discuss.

make no mention of the home talent that will help to make the event a success. The address of welcome by Hon. Earl D. Mallery, president of the Alliance Commercial Club, will be cordial and will help to make visitors feel at home and enjoy their stay in this city; Hon. Robert Graham, president of the Nebraska Stock Growers' Association, understands the live stock business and industry of western Nebraska "from A to Izzard" and will have some remarks that will be instructive, besides presiding at the sessions of the convention in his usual pleasing manner; the music, both vocal and instrumental, with which the business and addresses of the convention will be interspersed, will delight those who hear it; and last but not least to those who delight to "trip the light fantastic," will be the stockmen's grand ball in the opera house at the close of the convention.
