Herald Classified Advertisements are little wonder workers. You can easily prove this for yourself by spending a few cents on them. You get results, and that is what you pay for. Think—haven't you something to advertise.

If you have spare rooms read this—There is hardly a day that goes by but that someone calls at the Herald office looking for rooms, rooms for light housekeeping or a plain house. We are unable to supply the demand. If you have anything in this line it will pay you well to advertise it in the classified columns of the Herald. In many instances we rent the rooms for you before even the advertisement appears. It's service that counts and you get it in a Herald classified advertisement.

Sunday evening the fire department was called out to put out a fire in a small barn located at the back of the Andy Walmer property, 214 East Third Street. The building was owned by R. L. Harris and was used to keep the horse in. It is estimated that the damage amounted to some $50.

The fire department was called Tuesday evening just at six o'clock to put out a fire in an ash pile at the rear of the Presbyterian church. Some ashes had been dumped out and with the rising wind they were being scattered in every direction, with grave danger that some building might be caught on fire. The alarm was turned in just ahead of the big storm.

The benefit program given Monday evening at the Phelan opera house for the Christian church netted the promoters $78. The crowd filled the opera house and were rewarded with a program fitting to such an appreciative and responsive audience. Rev. Knowles, who closed a series of meetings at the Christian church on Sunday night was on the job with his lantern, providing the pictures for the illustrated songs. Report of the entertainment was a two-part monologue, "In His Steps," illustrated with some sixty slides. Mrs. J. O. Walker pleased all with her cornet solo, "The Holy City," same being illustrated by picture slides. Various children of the church competed in the selling of tickets. Delbert Cole won first prize of three dollars and Roy Young the second prize of one dollar.

About the Planets.

The albedo or reflecting power of the planets is believed to give a hint as to their physical condition. In a table prepared by Prof. H. N. Russell the albedo of the moon is given as 0.07; Mercury, 0.06; Venus, 0.52; Mars, 0.15; Jupiter, 0.56; Saturn, 0.53; Uranus, 0.61; and Neptune, 0.73. The earth's albedo, measured from the earthshine on the moon, has been placed as high as 0.80, though a new calculation indicates 0.45. The four large planets have high albedo on account of their cloud-laden atmospheres; that of Mercury, with practically no atmosphere, is low.
