Washington, D. C., November 7, 1917.

President of the United States of America.

g been the honored custom of our people to turn in the fruitful year in praise and thanksgiving to Almighty God for His many mercies to us as a nation. That custom we can follow now, even in the tragedy of a world shaken by war and immeasurable disaster, in sorrow and great peril, because even amidst the darkness that has fallen upon us we can see the great blessings God has bestowed upon us, and are better than mere peace of mind and prosperity of enterprise.

been given the opportunity to serve mankind as we once served our great day of our Declaration of Independence, by taking up arms against the threatened to master and debase men everywhere, and join peoples in demanding for all the nations of the world what we had obtained for ourselves.

of the revelation of our duty, not only to defend our own rights but to defend also the rights of free men throughout the world, there has been brought to one mind and purpose. A new vigor of and common action has been revealed in us. We should especially in such circumstances, in the midst of the greatest enterprise the have ever entered upon, we have, if we but observe a reasonable economy, abundance with which to supply the needs of those associated well as our own. A new light shines about us. The great duties of a new and greater national spirit in us. We shall never again under what stuff we are made of.

we render thanks for these things, let us pray Almighty God that of spirit we may look always to Him for guidance; that we may in the spirit and purpose of service; that by His grace our minds our hands strengthened, and that in His good time liberty and peace and the comradeship of a common justice may be the nations of the earth.

el, Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States of America, on Thursday, the 29th day of November next, as a day of thanksgiving, and invite the people throughout the land to cease upon that ordinary occupations and in their several homes and places of work to thank to God, the great ruler of nations.

whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the to be affixed.

the District of Columbia, this 7th day of November, in the year of the thousand nine hundred and seventeen and of the independence of the one hundred and forty-second.

“WOODROW WILSON.

ANSING, Secretary of State.”
