PRES. STEINHART'S ADDRESS

Preponderance is the name of the mighty tank that we must fashion, rivet together and advance to overwhelm and crush into the earth this awful monster that seeks to conquer the world.

"Our Annual Meeting" and "Our Nebraska Units" in my line of thought finally came together and the answer handicap us in any attempt we make. Conditions are favorable. Nebraska was never more prosperous. She has profited mightily from the war. Never in our most fantastic or wildest dreams did we ever see such floods of as to our meeting came also. The meeting might assist in the marshaling of the units of Nebraska to a greater efficiency along war work lines, and, even though it be but a small per cent, every fraction counts and any effort is worth while that leads up to a 100 per cent condition.

"The units to be assembled, properly meshed and geared to eliminate loss of time and power and waste in materials will start with our state senate and legislature, into our state house, our counties, our municipalities, our various lines of endeavor, our numerous public associations, down into the homes and the members thereof.

"We are not here today to eulogize ourselves as to our war work records, neither are we here to criticize in the least any act or any inactivity upon the part of any unit or set of units to go to form any part of Nebraska. We, today, are in the fighting trench here at home. The boys are facing the enemy in the fighting trenches across the waters. We are facing the enemy in the same direction only further back of the fighting line. A state of actual combat exists and the courtesy of peace times must be cast aside. We must grapple with conditions and with the enemy, determined to win.

Our State Legislature

Our fighting trench leads from our legislative bodies down into and among our people. The senate and the legislature have the responsibility of the enactment of laws big enough and broad enough to bring about the complete assembling of the fighting units of our state. They have the further responsibility of appropriating funds liberally, yes lavishly, in order to insure a degree of lubrication of all the units and the assembled movements, that will render Nebraska 100 per cent efficient in war work applied and all for the purpose of securing the preponderance absolutely required to win this war.

"Lack of laws granting authority, inadequate laws as to complete and quick action, failure to appropriate or inadequate appropriations will lock this fighting machine of ours to such an extent as to seriously affect the service required from our state to our nation at this time.

"It is important, nay momentous, that we study legislation for the coming session, that we interest ourselves in the candidacy of the American spirit, permitting only those with untarnished records to have to do with the important events of our 1918-19 legislature. Important that we study our laws and secure such amendments or the enactment of such new laws as will clothe our officials, from the state house down to the county, the city, town and village, organization with every authority permitting the greatest service and efficiency from our governing bodies. Important that we investigate the financial needs of these instrumentalities of our people, standing for adequate appropriations for all lines of state activity, looking towards supplementing, reinforcing and speeding up war work in Nebraska. It is more than important that we do all of this. It is our bounden duty and obligation and we cannot escape it.

"Our government is of the people, by the people, and for the people and as all of this must come from the people, if come at all it does, we must plan and prepare now that no default occurs. The autocracy, the one man form of government, the Kaiser kind, under locked doors, creates a fighting unit for its selfish interests and desires. Democracy plans and prepares in the sunlight of liberty and must not now be found wanting in the courage to do and dare or this preponderance so essential may swing in its balance, not towards, but against us at the critical moment.

"We have the courage, if only we can see aright. We must not confine our vision to narrow circles. We must see big, cease groping and lead out strong in the things to be done. Never in all time was man assigned to such a task, to think, to us, the active elements at this particular period of time, is given the most stupendous and the most vital task ever assigned to man. Will we be equal to the responsibility, will we measure up to the size of the job, will we deliver the goods? This is the question that confronts the people in Nebraska today, tomorrow and until the end of this war.

"The task is really twofold. We must work to win the war and at the same time work to create conditions looking towards the future welfare of our state. Either task sufficient, still we must meet the two at this time, permitting no default in either if we measure to the full stature thereof. What a heritage if history records master work at this time? What a disgrace if we are not sufficient and default occurs instead?

"If we have the courage to do and dare are conditions surrounding favorable for such action, or such as to

Railroad Notes

The reporter at the round house offers his apologies to the readers of the railroad news. As he has been sick news items passed him up. Today being busy with Red Cross work he was unable to glean the news from the boys, but promises a double dose next week.

Frank Bronchurst, night dispatcher at the depot was very seriously injured last night by a fall from a truck. It seems he pulled a truck up to a car and after entering the car the truck was moved for some reason. When Mr. Bronchurst stepped from the rear he, of course, fell unexpectedly, about five feet. Being totally unprepared for the fall it was that much more serious. Thursday he was unable to move, being paralyzed.

The Better and Different Kind of Wash Skirts

Wooltex-shrunk - Wooltex-tailored

ONE of the great difficulties with the ordinary Wash Skirt has always been that whatever style it had at the beginning was quickly lost in the laundering.

You will never have this trouble with a Wooltex-tailored Wash Skirt.

The Wooltex fabrics are pre-shrunk by a special cold water process that takes out all of the shrinkage. Belts are reinforced by whalebones as well as being pre-shrunk — keeping shapely and trim after repeated washings.

These Wash Skirts are designed and tailored by the highly skilled Wooltex tailors in the between-season time when they are not busy making the noteworthy Wooltex Coats and Suits for Young Women. This is an economy and makes possible the unusual values which you will find in the Wooltex-tailored Wash Skirts we are now showing.

We advise you to come early while the range of sizes and styles is complete.
