Will M. Maupin, state publicity director, who visited Alliance last week attending the state convention of Nebraska commercial clubs, had the following to say to a newspaper reporter upon his return to Lincoln: "The 'sand hill' region of Nebraska is coming into its own. The sand hills have been soaked time and again this spring, and as a result the pastures are in fine condition. Alfalfa never looked better, and it is easy to see a constantly increasing acreage each year. I have seen no finer wheat than the immense fields I saw in Box Butte county Wednesday in a couple of auto drives that permitted me to see practically all of the wonderful table in that county. I was with the delegates to the associated commercial clubs' convention at Alliance when they drove to Antioch to see great potash plants there. It was a revelation to most of them. Incidentally Antioch now has a population of 3,000, which is an increase of about 2,875 in less than three years. A most pleasing fact is the apparent increase in the number of cattle in the great grazing sections and the noticeable improvement in the breeds. It was raining at Alliance at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening, raining there when my train left at midnight and raining when I reached Lincoln. And there were evidences of rain all along the road. We used to speak of million dollar rains in Nebraska, but millions are small things these days. Nebraska is enjoying half-billion dollar rains this week."
