. THAT HOME TOWN SPIRIT *

Some folks play a lone hand. * They do not and care not to " form much attachment to their * place of abode and have no particular regret in leaving when the need arises-and no one else * cares or weeps any tears when ' * they move. They have re-* sponded to no calls for co-operation and no one feels any particular desire in helping them along; the community sains but little from their presence and a city made up of such people would surely be a dead *

Then there are those who feel and act an intense loyalty in * their home town and the people living in it; in all the undertakings and enterprises they can be counted upon. It is, no doubt, partly sentimental affection and partly a keen sense of the practical business value of co-op-* ance has a lot of these folks. Its progress is due to them. * They feel a cordial interest in * their fellow citizens. You can * always depend on them for · hearty support of any community project and every local en-terprise has their backing. Just so far as that idea prevails will the city realize its possibilities.

When this spirit exists it is a real pleasure to give preference and in all dealings that come from the home town. If a suit of clothes sold here is just as good for the money you pay why not buy it in Alliance? It would indeed be a good investment were it not quite so good as the other fellow offered, but thanks to the merchants of this town such a sacrifice is rarely, if ever, necessary. It is poor community spirit and deficient team work to buy stuff out of town unless after a thorough investigation we find it is not carried, * or can not be ordered for us, by the local dealer. When a town has this unified, co-operative, reciprocity spirit of team work you cannot stop its forward march. The compact mass of people working for common ends, will beat a greater population whose energies are divided.
