CLEAN UP AND PAINT UP

This campaign teaches men, women and children the principles of Thrift and its practice in the most practical and popular forms. It reduces fire insurance rates and fire losses, conserves and increases property values; makes gardens of vacant lots, raises unsightly and unsafe buildings, sweeps the fly, starts school and home gardens; makes cleaner alleys, yards and homes, educates children in fire prevention and sanitation, plants trees, removes rubbish, utilizes "waste," and makes more healthful and attractive and safer homes and places of business. It develops a community spirit that permanently insures a cleaner, safer, healthier and more beautiful city.

The cleanest town in the world is the best one to live in:
BEST—because healthiest.
BEST—because fewest fires.
BEST—because most beautiful.

NO LEAGUE, NO PEACE!

Shifting from a frontal to a flank attack, many opponents of a league of nations in a loud chorus began to charge that discussions of the covenant now before the Paris conference were delaying and threatening the conclusion of peace. The league may be a successful preventive of war, say these critics, but it should not be permitted to delay the signing of a treaty between the Allies and the Central Powers.

Two good and sufficient answers are returned to these assertions. The first in importance is that made by President Wilson himself. He is one of the principals in the Paris conference. He is a participant in all the discussions concerning the league and every other subject which is to be covered by the final treaty. He possesses at first hand complete and accurate information as to every plan and proposal. He is there as the delegate of the American people, and may be credited with a sense of the solemn moral and constitutional obligation which binds him to represent their interests to the best of his ability.

President Wilson has pointed out, in a formal statement, that the covenant of the proposed league has been before the world for a full month, and is now in the hands of a committee for the final process of drafting. Consideration of the covenant, the president assures the American people, has always been at times when it could not conflict with the commission's labors in connection with other problems of peace.

Members of the commission congratulate themselves on the fact that no part of their conferences has ever interposed any form of delay," says President Wilson.

William H. Taft has given the second answer to the contention that deliberations on the covenant have postponed the completion of a treaty with Germany. In a copyrighted editorial in the Philadelphia Public Ledger Mr. Taft says:

"The league of nations was made the first subject of consideration by the conference because it could be more promptly and easily disposed of than other issues earning their ugly heads among the Allies."

Mr. Taft then shows that the questions of boundaries, annexations, indemnities and economic adjustments represent the chief difficulties of the conference. No treaty is likely unless these difficulties are removed, and no permanent peace is possible even after their elimination, Mr. Taft says, unless beforehand all the Allies and the principal nations of the world are firmly united and unified in a league.

"The signing of a treaty which formally restores peace with Germany and Austria-Hungary will not give us peace unless there is a guaranty in the power of the united Allies to compel peace. That power will be dissolved unless . . . a league of nations shall be established, not only to suppress immediate disorder, but also to settle differences, of which a great number will at once arise between the new governments established and the old ones cut down, and to enforce the settlements peaceably arrived at."

As a deduction from his review of the situation with which the Paris conference is dealing, Mr. Taft says: "The truth is, a league of nations is necessary to a satisfactory treaty. It helps and speeds it."

SENATOR LODGE INCONSISTENT

Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, is inconsistent in his insistence that the senate be called together to advise the president on the League of Nations plan. In his recent debate with President Lowell, of Harvard University, he said:

"He (the president) did not lay it before the constitutional body which is entitled to advise him, but he does not call the senate together now to consider it. If they want to know in Paris what amendments were required, call together the constitutional advisers of the president and the amendments will be drafted and sent."

In a debate in the senate in 1906, defending President Roosevelt's foreign policy, and in particular the sending of representatives to the Algeciran conference to settle the Moroccan question, Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, one of the ablest republicans ever in that body, declared that "from the foundation of the government it had been conceded in practice and in theory that the constitution vests the power of negotiation and the various phases of our foreign relations exclusively in the president." When the president shall have negotiated and sent a proposed treaty to the senate, "the jurisdiction of this body attaches and its power begins," he declared.

Supporting Senator Spooner, Senator Lodge declared that "We (the senate) have no possible right to break suddenly into the middle of a negotiation and demand from the president what instructions he has given to his representatives."

Senator Lodge's support of the League of Nations plan might have been expected, if he was sincere in what he said in concluding that speech:

"It is the policy of the United States to be at peace; but more than that, the policy and interest of the United States alike demand the peace of the world, and it is not to be supposed for a moment that we are never to exert our great moral influence or to use our good offices for the maintenance of the world's peace."

NO APOLOGY NECESSARY

No apology need be made by the Government in asking for the Victory Loan. It is no time to attack the policy of the Government in war until that war and its resultant peace are paid for. It is not within reason to criticize those who were the leaders in America's successful military campaign until we can face the world with a clean financial war slate.

The war is won and we have peace—what we fought for. We may have made mistakes, but we were not alone if we did. Other governments made mistakes more serious than our own. But unless you can say you could have conducted the war without making some mistakes you have not the right to hinder the Victory Liberty Loan by offering the excuse that "mistakes were made."

Unless you could have built a bridge of boats, a fleet of transports, flocks of airplanes and made tons and tons of munitions, all of which did so much to bring the costly war to a close much sooner than expected, and could have done it better and more cheaply than did the Government, you are not consistent in allowing your criticism to find voice as an argument against your support of the Victory Liberty Loan.

When the people of Box Butte county have stood solidly behind our soldiers and our country by squaring our accounts and supporting the principles for which we fought, then only can we conscientiously haggle among ourselves about whether or not we could have carried on the war more successfully or more gracefully than did those who did lead in its conduct.

WOULD TAX FARM BONDS

Representative McFadden, of Pennsylvania, a member of the House Banking and Currency Committee, is out with a proposal to tax the Federal Land Bank bonds and the joint stock land bank bonds, now exempted. As one editorial writer puts it, "this somewhat distinguished republican congressman proposes to take this slap at the farmers, under the pretext of hitting the wealthy bond owners; just as though the farmers had not already been slapped enough, or it was a crime for a man to be rich enough to be an investor in farm loan bonds."

Taxation of such bonds will simply mean a higher rate of interest for the farmers, and they will therefore pay the tax.

Remarkable Success of these Talented Physicians in the Treatment of Chronic Diseases

EXAMINATION AND CONSULTATION FREE

The diagnostician of the United Doctors, licensed by the state of Nebraska, for the treatment of chronic diseases of men, women and children, offer to all who call on this visit, consultation, examination and advice free. They have a system and method of treatments that are sure and certain in their results.

These doctors are experts in the treatment of chronic diseases of the blood, liver, stomach, intestines, heart, kidneys or bladder, rheumatism, sciatica, dropsy, leg ulcers, weak lungs, and those afflicted with long standing, deep seated, chronic diseases, that have baffled the skill of other physicians, should not fail to call.

According to their system no more operation for appendicitis, gall stones, goiter, piles, etc., as all cases accepted will be treated without operation or hypodermic injection. If you have kidney or bladder troubles bring a 4-ounce bottle of your urine for chemical analysis and microscopic examination.

Worn-out and run-down men and women, no matter what your ailment may be, no matter what you have been told, or the experience you have had with other physicians, settle it forever in your mind. If your case is incurable they will tell you so. Consult them upon this visit. It costs you nothing for examination.

Remember, this free offer is for this visit only. Married ladies must come with their husbands and minors with their parents.

ON THE FARM

DENBY MOTOR TRUCKS

Farming is the most extensive business in the world—here Denby Trucks have proved, time and time again, their proud claim of being profit makers and money savers.

There are over seventy-five thousand motor trucks in use on the farm today. Seventy-five per cent of Denby sales in Nebraska are made to farmers.

Something must be fundamentally right about Denby Construction to command such respect among farmers. And there is. You will find this basic "rightness" in every part of Denby Construction from the powerful, economical motors, all the way through to the removable bushings that protect each wearable part, and which save the cost of replacing the part itself when wear does take place—a big saving of time and money.

There's a whole lot more of "mechanical details" we could go into, but lack of space forbids. See the Denby for yourself at the Auto Show. We are there to answer questions. Come in any time. You're always welcome.
