GOING CHEAP

At a sale in Montreal of the stage effects of the recently deceased actor, Sir Herbert Tree, the royal crowns of kings and queens brought four pounds apiece, and a local poet was inspired to write the following verses: Oh, who would be a sceptered knig And sit upon a throne, In regal duds, to strut about, What time one's humble subjects shout, Or (maybe) hiss or groan. To be addressed as "Good my liege," By all the common clay Were rapture, so it seems to me: Well, here's an opportunity, For crowns are cheap today!

Why should not every profiteer A jeweled scepter wave? For though 'tis not their cue to boast, They boss the world and rule the roast— The public is their slave. Though czars and kaisers are deposed For ever and a day, We've still got knavish autocrats In nobby suit and shiny hats: These be our kings today!

Let's stick on profiteering heads An eighty-shilling crown, Mean knivishness to advertise, Commercial greediness and lies, When they appear in town. And let this legend be affixed To every crown, I say, "This bauble fits a loathsome thing— A scurvy knave who'd be a king And rule the land, today!"

Japan didn't fight in the war like some, but she was clever enough to get part of the spoils.—Record.

Another Joke From Washington. Another one of the funny things that come out of Washington is the advice for everybody to take an ax and go out and chop a lot of hickory and oak wood—and bid defiance to the coal man. The boss of this paper was born and raised in the deep, dark, tall timber—hickory and oak predominating. But, today there is not hickory and oak enough left in the county to make kindling wood. Out here, on these vast prairies that stretch from the Mississippi river to the Rocky mountains, we have our towns, called by the warm and shady sounding names of Oak Hill, Hickory Siding, Maple Valley, Walnut Ridge and other timberiferous cognomen—but you can travel for miles in every direction from any one of them and not find wood enough to kindle a campfire. No wonder a lot of us are getting so we want to make the Yuma desert look as though it was frozen up whenever we get an invoice of this advice from the college boys, financial failures and investigation maniacs who get elections and appointments to go down to Washington and tell the country how to run itself.—Record.
